Secretary
Board of Trustees

Following the meeting, the Board hosted the fourth annual luncheon honoring the faculty whose promotions and tenure had been approved that day.
Good morning. Thank you all for being here today. It's been nearly two busy months since the last board meeting, and it's been a very busy time. I have a number significant pieces of news to report.

Breaking news

EPA Research

I'd like to start with a couple of pieces of very recent news. First, we learned late last week that Western Michigan University is one of 13 research schools around the nation selected by the Environmental Protection Agency to be part of one of the most extensive atmospheric studies every undertaken to determine how the formation of aerosol particles in the air can impact regional and global climate. Chemistry Professor Steve Bertman is in central Alabama now collecting data and leading a WMU-based team of researchers from three other universities. The EPA funding will bring nearly $400,000 to our University.

Physician Assistant Awards

We've also just learned that two of our alumni have been selected as the recipients of national awards that are reserved for the very best professionals in the Physician Assistant profession.
PA Awards. When the American Association of Physician Assistants met in Washington early last week, they named Jeffrey Collard of Fenton, Mich., as the nation's 2013 AAPA Outstanding PA of the Year. He is a 1988 alumnus and an emergency room PS specialist in Ann Arbor. The AAPA also named Earle Canfield of Grand Rapids as the 2013 AAPA Humanitarian PA of the Year. He is a 1990 WMU alumnus.

Green Leader
Monday of this week, this University was honored by the Detroit Free Press as the 2013 Green Leader in the public-sector category. The Free Press judging panel praised WMU for its culture of environmental awareness and some three decades of work as a green institution. They got it right, and it is always gratifying to see our university recognized for the work done by our faculty, staff and students across the campus.

China-Japan trip
During May, I spent two weeks visiting China and Japan. If I didn't know our stature in that region already, it could have been a crash course in how highly regarded Western Michigan University is in both of those nations. While in China, Dr. Timothy Light joined me. He is held in particularly high regard there and is an enormously valuable advocate for this university. We spend some time talking about potential new partnerships that tap the expertise in our aviation, business, public affairs, tourism and even medicine.
In Japan, we have decades of partnership with several universities and have brought many Japanese students to WMU. That has left us with a core group of alumni who celebrate their Bronco connections. I was privileged to spend time with the alumni of Kalamazoo Kai, which is perhaps our oldest and largest alumni group there, with members who attended WMU in the 1970s and 80s.

Malaysian Games
I returned to campus just in time for the official closing of a successful three days of the Malaysian Midwest Games 2013 that brought around 1,000 visitors to our campus for the Memorial Day weekend. Among those visitors was the Malaysian ambassador to the U.S. who flew in from Washington to spend the entire weekend here presiding over this annual athletic competition for Malaysian students studying at colleges and universities around the U.S. and Canada. With more than 2,500 alumni in Malaysia, our ties with that nation are among the strongest for any U.S. university

Fulbrights
Our ties with other nations around the world are expanding as well. Last fall, we had our largest group ever of incoming Fulbright Fellows-graduate students from around the globe who had won a Fulbright award to study in the U.S. Last fall, we had an incoming class of 11, who joined Fulbrights who were continuing their studies here for a total of 27 Fulbrights on our campus. This fall, we've learned we have an incoming class of 16 who will join with continuing students to bring our number of campus Fulbrights to 34. They are master's-level and PhD students from nations that range from Russia and East Timor to Israel and the Ivory Coast.

Faculty and student accomplishments

I always like to include in my remarks some outstanding accomplishments of our faculty, staff and students.

For the student accomplishments, let me stay on today's international theme.

Freshman Mingyuan (MINGwahn) Yang, is one of the world's top young bassoon players. He grew up and received his early training in Zhengzhou, China. Two years ago, when he was just 17, he traveled 600 mile alone by train to hear a group of WMU music faculty members perform at Sichuan University. He met his future mentor there, Dr. Gwendolyn Rose, took a class with her and went through the process of enrolling at WMU so he could continue to study with her.

On June 27, he will compete to be named the top young bassoonist in the world by the International Double Reed Society in its Young Artist Competition. The two other finalists are both students at the prestigious Oberlin Conservatory of Music in Ohio.

We have just learned that three of our undergraduates have won prestigious Gilman Scholarships from the U.S. State Department to study abroad. The awards total $13,500 and will:

- Allow Stephanie Stanfield of Bellevue to travel to the Dominican Republic to pursue Latin America Studies and Spanish;
- Jared Sipes of Kalamazoo to travel to Russia for Russian language studies; and
- Matthew Dziedpk (ZEEpack) of Mattawan to travel to the Michigan's Japan Center in Shiga Prefecture for Japanese language studies.

Faculty accomplishments

And finally, I'll close by mentioning the accomplishments of a member of our music faculty--and our fine arts dean--Dr. Margaret Merrion, who is retiring at the end of this month. Dr. Merrion was honored by the Kalamazoo YWCA as a 2013 Woman of Achievement. Her award was sponsored by the Kalamazoo Community Foundation, and she was selected because her 13 years as dean "has been characterized by spectacular success for students, outstanding opportunities in the arts for our community and an extraordinary level of personal service on her part to the national arts community. " The honor was well deserved. We are justifiably proud of Dean Merrion's service and accomplishments.

And now, I'll turn the mic back to Chair Carlson so she may introduce our student and faculty leaders who will make remarks as well.
Jeanne Carlson
Board Remarks
6/12/13

Good Morning.

I am delighted to see you all this morning. I'm also truly pleased to be here on a morning when the building and the campus are so alive with the energy of incoming freshmen and their families who are here for new student orientation. We have more than 3,200 new freshmen coming this month to attend a series of 12, day-and-a-half orientation sessions. Accompanying them are some 4,100 parents and family members who are attending their own sessions aimed at making them part of the Bronco family.

Today is the start of Session #5. Such sessions will continue through the end of the month. The campus looks spectacular and everyone is focused on welcoming that incoming freshman class. These orientation sessions give students and their families a taste of campus life and a good sense of Bronco spirit. That spirit literally permeates this building today.

Broncoland

To help keep freshmen thinking about what it's like to be first-year students, our orientation participants are heading home with a new tool--the Broncoland Game that will let them preview some of the challenges of being a new student--as well as the resources we have to help them face those challenges and maximize their opportunities.
Development of the 3D, interactive game has been a labor of love for the faculty and staff members on our 21st Century Student Committee. They employed talented IT students to make sure the game meets the rigorous standards and expectations of our prospective students. I want to thank those involved for their hard work on this and for their commitment to making sure students know WMU is focused on using every tool imaginable to make their transition to college a seamless one.

Bigelow/Hoekje

To make way for new residence halls that will serve the needs of new students like the ones attending orientation this week, the campus said goodbye last Friday to Bigelow and Hoekje (Hoke-yah) halls. I understand the event attracted people with fond memories and lots of stories about the lasting impact of a WMU education—or at least the part of an education that happens outside the classroom. It also was a time of moving tributes by members of the families of the buildings' namesakes. I applaud the opportunity alumni had to come back and reflect on the lasting impact campus life has had on them. And I was so pleased to hear about the families' involvement.

DownBeat

Among the resources and opportunities we like to tell students about is the opportunity to hear world-class musical performances on campus on a regular basis. This campus is famous for it. We have professional visiting artists of course, but it is our own students who provide the widest array or music on a daily basis. We know how good our students are, and of course it's terrific when what we know is validated by an outside entity.

Just a few weeks ago, we learned that for the second year in a row, music students from Western Michigan University pocketed six coveted awards in DownBeat magazine's annual student music competition. Those six awards were the third most for any college or university worldwide. And, WMU was the only school in Michigan to be recognized by DownBeat with even one award.

Tuition
Those are just a few student accomplishments that reflect the quality of this University.

Providing the resources to continue that quality is at the core of the budget decisions we will make today as we set the coming year's budget and decide on tuition rates. These are decisions that determine what Western Michigan University is able to offer to every student who qualifies for enrollment here, and they are decisions that determine the level of quality that is sustained for future students. My fellow trustees and I always want members of the University community and the public we all serve to know how seriously we consider these decisions.

Closing
And now, I'm going to turn the microphone over to President Dunn, who has some additional items to share with you.
...After President Dunn's remarks.

Now it's time to hear from our student and faculty leadership. We have with us today, the newly elected president of the Western Student Association John-Mark Cuarto (MARK QWAHR toh); Damon Roberts chair of the Graduate Student Advisory Committee; Faculty Senate President William Rantz, and AAUP Vice President Lisa Minnick.
