HESSELINK

Interviewer: Miss Hesselink, I trust you have filled out all of the necessary papers for this trip.

Hesselink: Oh, yes. But, I'm afraid you're going to have trouble with some of the others. You know, some people just don't take the trouble to let us know when they have a change of address.

Interviewer: Do you consider that this will be a permanent change of address for you?

Hesselink: On the moon?! Heavens, no! ~~I don't want to get back to attend to a lot of things.~~ ~~Anyway~~ I can't afford to be gone very long; it costs so much. Anyway, I have ~~to get back to~~ ~~to attend to~~ so many things back here. And I don't know what Mr. MacDonald would do if he had to get out the budget sheets along.

Interviewer: Well, we'll try to get you back---

Hesselink: (cutting in) And Lloyd Jessen thinks I ought to write my memoirs.

Interviewer: That ought to be interesting; you've seen a lot of people come and go.

Hesselink: I certainly have; but, you know, I think I could make more money ~~fr~~ from what I didn't write than I could from what I did write.

Interviewer: Maybe you could write two books--one to publish and one to be paid for not publishing it.

Hesselink: Yes! Well, I think about that. Isn't it about time for us to take off?

Interviewer: Almost; well, have a good trip, Miss Hesselink. We'll be expecting to hear from you.
