The genuine friendliness and the democratic spirit of the Western Michigan University campus directly reflect the policies and practices of Paul V. Sangren during the twenty-four years of his presidency. These attitudes have embraced both faculty and students, and have set the prevailing tone for the conduct of all University affairs.

President Sangren came to Western in 1923, with the avowed intention of devoting his life to the classroom preparation of teachers. However, his talents as an administrator soon became evident, and his career has proceeded through a number of responsible posts: director of the bureau of educational research, 1926; head of the department of education, 1928; dean of administration, 1934, and president, September 1, 1936.

Dr. Sangren's leadership will be sorely missed, but the University will continue to prosper because of the foundation which he has so carefully built.
