WMU Giving Day

WMU Giving Day is October 3. You can give back to the College of Health and Human Services throughout our 95th Homecoming week, October 1-6.

Help WMU's national rankings while you support the programs you love and help vulnerable students finish their education here at WMU.

Annual events at CHHS

The 2018 Van Riper Lectures are Oct. 25-26 at the WMU Fetzer Center. The conference, hosted by the Department of Speech, Language and Hearing Sciences, is focused on contextualizing interventions and implementing policies in schools. Keynote speakers are Dr. Teresa Ukrainetz and Dr. Jaumeiko Coleman.

The 2018 Barbara A. Rider Colloquium is Friday, Oct. 26. This daylong event features lectures and sessions with leading OT educators and practitioners. The keynote speaker is Dr. Elizabeth Skidmore, a 2016 inductee into the CHHS Outstanding Alumni Academy.

OT professor presents at Belgium symposium

Dr. Diane Powers-Foltz Dirette, professor in the Department of Occupational Therapy, was invited to present the keynote address at the Belgium Occupational Therapy Research Symposium, held earlier in September at the Catholic University of Leuven in Belgium.

Book-It book drive for United Way

CHHS is proud to participate in this year's Book-It campaign through United Way. Studies show that reading helps children develop tools to succeed in academics and in life. This book drive seeks children's books for young readers in the Kalamazoo area.

Social Work experience in Chicago

Nine students from WMU's School of Social Work traveled to Chicago this summer for an intercultural learning course. Students experienced intercultural dialogue and learning and enjoyed some of the main multicultural offerings of the area.
Golf outing benefits individuals with hearing loss

The second annual Student Academy of Audiology Golf Outing was held in August to raise money for hearing service scholarships for low-income patients in the Charles Van Riper Hearing Clinic in the Unified Clinics at Western Michigan University.

Welcome to our guests from Ulster University in Northern Ireland, OT students Laura Gray and Allison Graham! We have so enjoyed getting to know you! (Just so you know, they were NOT shopping for t-shirts during this pic....it is ALL business around here.)

Giving Day at CHHS

WMU Giving Day is your chance to give back to the College of Health and Human Services during our 95th Homecoming week, October 1-6.

Did you know that more than three quarters of students at WMU receive some sort of financial support from the University? WMU Giving Day is a chance for the University to gather donor support to provide scholarships, travel funds, emergency medical aid and more. This support enables students to stay in school, graduate prepared and incur less of a financial burden from student loan debt.

The University initiated Giving Day in 2017 to focus on alumni-donors for a single day during Homecoming week. First, because it presents an opportunity for alumni to support their programs, their colleges and their alma mater.

Giving Day donations also help WMU’s national rankings. Publications like U.S. News and World Report base their rankings on student retention and graduation rates; but they also factor in alumni giving.

VISIT THE GIVING DAY WEBSITE
GET INVOLVED

Here’s how you can get involved in Giving Day and help support students from the College of Health and Human Services:

Visit mywmu.com/givingday between October 1-6 and make a gift of any amount. You will be able to designate your gift to any of our endowed scholarships or to our unrestricted accounts. The simple act of giving to WMU will impact our national rankings.

In case you're competitive, your gift may also help the college in ways larger than the amount of your donation.

- The college with the most donors will be awarded $2000 to be designated by the dean to the greatest need in their area.
- The academic department with the most donors will be awarded $3000 to be designated back to that area.
- A randomly selected first time donor who is a WMU alumnus/alumna will receive $1000 to designate to any fund at WMU.

SPEAKERS

Teresa Ukrainetz, Ph.D., ASHA Fellow
Professor and SLP Division Chair
Department of Communicative Disorders and Deaf Education, Utah State University

Dr. Ukrainetz's research and scholarship pertain to the framework, procedures, and tools of school-age language intervention. She studies how skills and contexts intersect, and how to optimize those intersections in treatment to make meaningful differences for SLPs and their students. She has investigated norm-referenced tests, dynamic assessment, treatment intensity, phonemic awareness intervention, narrative assessment and intervention, and the role of the school SLP. Dr. Ukrainetz’s current research addresses how SLPs can use their distinctive expertise to improve students' expository language and learning. Her publications have included Journal of Speech, Language, and Hearing Research; Language, Speech, and Hearing Services in Schools; and Early Childhood Research Quarterly.

Jaumeiko Coleman, Ph.D.
American Speech-Language-Hearing Association’s (ASHA) School Services, Director

Dr. Coleman is responsible for tracking national trends that impact the work of school-based speech-language pathologists as well as coordinating the development of resources and collaborating on the creation of policy to support school-based ASHA members. Her previous work positions include speech-language pathologist in a K-5 school setting, an assistant professor at both Pennsylvania State University and George Washington University, an administrator in two capacities (i.e., education program specialist and school improvement officer) for the District of Columbia Public School System, and associate director in ASHA’s National Center for Evidence-Based Practice.

OT professor presents at Belgium symposium

Dr. Diane Powers-Foltz Dirette
Dr. Diane Powers-Foltz Dirette, professor in the Department of Occupational Therapy, was invited to present the keynote address at the Belgium Occupational Therapy Research Symposium, held earlier in September at the Catholic University of Leuven in Belgium.

Her presentation, "Publishing OT Research: Challenges and Opportunities," was delivered to occupational therapists and other applied health professionals from all over Belgium. The symposium also included faculty and Ph.D. student research presentations from universities throughout Belgium.

In addition to her keynote presentation, Dr. Dirette also led a workshop entitled "Tips for Successful Scholarly Publication: Practical Session," in which she helped researchers apply the information from her keynote presentation.

"Dr. Dirette has long been instrumental in helping others succeed in publication of clinical research," says Dr. Ben Atchison, retired chair of the Department of Occupational Therapy. "She is recognized internationally for her research and for her work on the Open Journal of Occupational Therapy."

Dr. Dirette's research is focused on self awareness among persons with brain injury. She is also editor in chief of the Open Journal of Occupational Therapy, an open source journal published by the WMU Department of Occupational Therapy and widely read by occupational therapists around the globe.

Collecting books for United Way

The College of Health and Human Services is proud to participate in this year's Book-It program, which is part of WMU's 2018 campaign with United Way. Studies show that reading helps give children the tools to be successful in both academics and in life. The Book-It campaign is a book drive collecting children's books for young readers in the Kalamazoo area.

Last year, the college met its book collection goal of 1000 books. Because of last year's success, this year's goal is to collect 2000 new and gently-used children's books.
While any children's book is appreciated, the priority for the program is to gather as many books as possible for the Kindergarten through third grade reading levels. Studies have shown that, for children in this age group, reading greatly impacts mental development and prepares children for academic success.

A second area that the program is targeting is books that have a multicultural perspective. It is important for the diverse young readers in and around Kalamazoo to see their cultures reflected in the books they read.

Drop-off boxes are located throughout WMU’s main campus. There are two boxes in the CHHS building. One in the dean's suite (room 2475) and one near the building’s main (west) entrance. Monetary donations also are accepted online.

The Book-It program officially begins Oct. 8 and runs through Oct. 31.

Social work experience in Chicago

Nine students from Western Michigan University's School of Social Work traveled to Chicago this summer for SWRK 6350, an intercultural learning course taught by Dr. Dee Sherwood and Marian Tripplett.

Students visited Kids Off the Block, a non-profit organization dedicated to creating safe space for at risk youth on Chicago's Southside and a living memorial for youth killed by gun violence.

Students also observed a Friday prayer service at a mosque. Following the service, faculty and students conversed with the director of the Muslim Community Center about common misconceptions of Islam and strategies to build understanding and awareness.
"Social work students at main campus and at the extended university locations in Grand Rapids and Benton Harbor encounter a good deal of diversity," says Dr. Sherwood. "However, much of everyday life is segregated by social, economic and racial dynamics. Our course in Chicago offers an opportunity to intentionally experience a broader range of diversity on a much greater scale."

Students visited the LGBT Center and the Access Living Center for disability advocacy. They enjoyed a taste of soul food in the Southside African American community, and viewing artwork and murals in Pilsen's Mexican American and Paseo Boricua (Puerto Rican) communities. Students also experienced the East Indian communities of Devon Avenue's Little India.

Following their travel, students reflect and write about how they will apply new understandings and learning to strengthen their own communities.

Golf outing benefits individuals with hearing loss

The 2nd Annual Student Academy of Audiology Golf Outing was held in August to raise money for hearing service scholarships for low-income patients in the Charles Van Riper Hearing Clinic in the Unified Clinics at Western Michigan University.
The day included a silent auction, raffle and meal, which followed the 18-hole scramble.

With 52 golfers and 25 volunteers, the outing raised more than $6,000, which is three times what the group raised with the 2017 event. More than 50 donors, including individuals and businesses, made contributions.

The Western Michigan University Student Academy of Audiology helps lead students in activities of volunteering, fundraising and advocacy for the profession of audiology, as well as the populations that they serve. SAA plans to continue their fundraising efforts and hold yearly golf outings.
