As much as I would love to say that everything about studying abroad is sunshine and rainbows, today I am going to tell you about one of the unfortunate challenges that come with studying abroad. Unless you plan to stay in the place that you are studying, at some point you will need to return to reality. That means you need to build a life for yourself for when you return to the United States which I have found to be challenging and even frustrating from abroad. Hopefully I can provide some constructive advice by sharing my experience but if nothing else this should demonstrate how important it is to think ahead when studying abroad.
