SPRAU TOWER, BROWN HALL, SHAW THEATER

First Academic Bldgs. of Liberal Arts Complex Dedicated

The three initial academic buildings of Western's dramatic Liberal Arts Complex were dedicated in early May before three hundred spectators in outdoor ceremonies held on the gracious plaza which draws the buildings together into a single unity. The University Auditorium, which had its grand opening in January, joins these first academic buildings in the complex to lend a cultural aura to this outstanding educational center.

Among the most honored and revered of the guests were Dr. William R. Brown and Miss Laura V. Shaw, and Mrs. George Sprau, the wife of the man for whom the faculty office tower is named, who, at the age of 92, was unable to attend the dedication.

Program participants included state senator N. Lorraine Beebe '32 of Dearborn and state representative Cyril H. Root of Kalamazoo; Fred Adams '32, vice chairman of the WMU Board of Trustees; WMU President, James W. Miller; and the dedication speaker, Charles A. Smith '35, associate professor of English at WMU, who provided a highly humorous anecdotal glimpse into the WMU lives of the three persons for whom the buildings are named. He concluded with, "... these were warm, substantial people, and above all, they were excellent teachers."

Professor Sprau joined WMU's faculty in 1909, was named English Department head in 1917 and continued until retirement in 1946.

Dr. Brown, for whom the liberal arts classroom building is named, served on WMU's English faculty 1917-56, the final 10 years as department head.

Miss Shaw, for whom the new university theatre is named, served WMU 1918-53 retiring as head of the Spech Department.

Sprau Tower has 160 faculty offices in its 10 floors; Brown Hall contains classrooms for three academic departments (English, Speech and Languages); and Shaw Theatre seats 600 in continental style and has a 150-seat experimental theater as well as scene, costume, dressing, make-up and storage facilities.
WMU Commencement
Has Largest Honors
Degree Contingent

Western's April commencement produced a record list of honors graduates as 56 students received bachelor's degrees with honors, including six who were graduated Summa Cum Laude (at least 3.9 on a 4.0 scale). Another 17 were Magna Cum Laude graduates (3.7 to 3.89) and 33 were Cum Laude (3.5 to 3.69).

As an audience of 10,300, including some 1,500 graduates, listened Dr. Lewis M. Branscomb, chairman of the Joint Institute for Laboratory Astrophysics on the campus of the University of Colorado, said "there is cause for deep concern about our universities."

The commencement speaker said today's graduates "are standing midstream in a rushing torrent, looking upstream at the oncoming flood of turbulent change, of shattered self-confidence, of spreading violence."

The university, he said, has an essential function in facing this tide of events, that of providing suitable environment in which the search for solutions can be carried out with reason, intelligence, sensitivity, effectiveness and courtesy.

Said Dr. Branscomb, "Our universities and our young people are the real hope for a revitalization of our society."

He was awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Science. In addition, Mrs. Dorothy L. Judd of Grand Rapids received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree. She has a long history of vital involvement in community problems, having been a teacher, local and state president of the League of Women Voters, member of the Michigan Civil Service Commission, and member of the history-making Michigan Constitutional Convention.

The six Summa Cum Laude graduates included a husband-wife team, Theodore and Sally Sundstrom of Grand Rapids, Christine Alberti of Kalamazoo, Carl L. Swidorski of Manistee, Janice A. Vanderwal of East Grand Rapids, and Thomas Chu Ping-kee of Hong Kong.

Theodore Sundstrom carried a remarkable 4.0 grade average, all A's.

WMU Establishes Martin Luther King, Jr. Scholarship Fund to Aid Negro Students

Western Michigan University has established the Martin Luther King, Jr. Scholarship Grant Fund to perpetuate Dr. King's principles which exemplify "the conscience of America."

Spring Enrollment Shows Popularity of Year-Round Class Schedules at WMU

Western's spring session enrollment this year topped that of the spring session last year by nearly 150 as WMU students are more and more taking advantage of WMU's year-round schedule. The enrollment this spring of 7,940 represents 46 percent of the winter semester enrollment (17,325).

The breakdown shows that 6,156 are undergraduates and 1,784 are graduate students, including 50 doctoral candidates in the School of Graduate Studies.

President James W. Miller said, "The continuing growth of Western's spring session clearly indicates the effectiveness of its year-round operation. The modified trimester schedule adopted by the University certainly makes the most efficient use of our faculty and our physical facilities. It enables the University to produce in an academic year more credit hours than any other year-round schedule."

Out-of-State Tuition Charges Raised By WMU

Effective with the start of the summer session at WMU on June 25, tuition for out-of-state students will be increased to $450 a semester from its present $400. The increase was authorized by the WMU Board of Trustees at a spring meeting.

In addition, the Board of Trustees also approved an increase to $455 a semester for board and room in residence halls (from the previous $410 rate) and an increase to $400 (from $320) per course for pilot training.

Nine Week Seminar To Africa, Orient This Summer

A number of Western Michigan University graduate and undergraduate students will extend WMU's campus limits to East Africa and the Orient this summer under a nine week travel-study seminar sponsored by the Department of Sociology. Dr. Leonard C. Kercher, who'll direct the seminar, says the lecture and field study seminar will focus on developing national institutions in WMU, Kalamazoo Schools Combine to Train Teachers Of Educationally Deprived

This year Western's Teacher Education Department, in cooperation with the Kalamazoo Public School District, is offering an experimental program for prospective teachers of the educationally deprived. Although Western's School of Education has taken a leadership role in the training of such teachers at the graduate level, this pilot project is the first specialized attempt at the undergraduate level to train teachers of the educationally deprived.

WMU students who have enrolled in the experimental program assist four mornings a week in Kalamazoo public schools. Their experience consists of working with individuals or small groups of students as a means of helping their regular teachers give individualized instruction to classroom groups.

During the afternoons the WMU students returned to the campus for normal course work.

WMU Again Site For Upward Bound Teacher Training

Western this summer will conduct its third consecutive Upward Bound Program to encourage high school students from low-income families to continue their education in college. The program is aimed at encouraging high school students of "potentially normal ability, but of disadvantaged backgrounds, to enter and succeed in college." About 90 of this summer's Upward Bound enrollees are now high school sophomores and juniors and about 30 are seniors, most of whom will probably enroll in college next fall. Twelve of the 30 seniors from last year's WMU Upward Bound Program who did enroll in college are attending Western.

the emerging countries, especially in East Africa.

The primary nations to be considered by the seminar group will be Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania. The University College at Nairobi, Kenya, has joined Western in arranging the seminar.

The travel-study tour is intended for social science teachers and advanced students in the social sciences, especially those interested in the developing nations of the non-Western World. Participants may earn six semester hours of credit in anthropology, economics, geography, history, political science or sociology.

Stopovers to and from the prime seminar locations will include Greece, Ethiopia, India, Thailand, Hong Kong or Taiwan, Japan and Hawaii. Dr. William Garland, chairman of WMU's African Studies Program, will be associate director of the seminar.
