JUNE GOSSEAUX

NIGHT SONG

And now you sleep.
A breeze from the open window
Stirs the love-laden air,
Gently caressing and cooling
The two of us.

You sleep like a child,
Curled in contentment
As the soft night breeze
Stirs the wisps of hair
On your forehead.

Yet when the bright morning sun
Shines through the same open window
You will leave,
And the hot morning sun
Will not warm me.
