6-8-2010

Annual State Conference Michigan ACE Network for Women Leaders in Higher Education

John M. Dunn
Western Michigan University, john.dunn@wmich.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.wmich.edu/dunn

Part of the Higher Education Commons

WMU ScholarWorks Citation
https://scholarworks.wmich.edu/dunn/169

This Speech is brought to you for free and open access by the Office of the President at ScholarWorks at WMU. It has been accepted for inclusion in WMU President John Dunn by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at WMU. For more information, please contact maira.bundza@wmich.edu.
Annual State Conference
Michigan ACE Network for Women Leaders in Higher Education
June 8, 2010, Henry Center, MSU

Context:

Attendees are 250-300 people (usually all women—but a smattering of men) from Michigan universities and colleges (this includes representation from public and private institutions - two and four year - and community colleges). As well as a number of interested parties who are involved in higher education and support the role that higher ed inevitably plays in the continuing development of Michigan’s economy and quality of life.

You are the 2nd person speaking, ______ will introduce the video.

Following the video....

ACE is said “A”, “C”, “E”

Good Morning! On behalf of Western Michigan University, this year’s conference host institution, I would like to welcome you to the Michigan A.C.E. Network for Women Leaders annual summer conference. Through my own affiliation with the national American Council on Education, I am familiar with the history of the Michigan A.C.E. Network, which is one of the most active state networks in the nation.

WMU believes in the mission of the Michigan A.C.E. Network, which is committed to strengthening and expanding opportunities in higher education for women in Michigan. In fact, we live that every day, and I am very proud that women from every level of WMU have been able to contribute their talents to the development of this 2010 conference. I want to offer thanks to the conference planning team lead by the conference chair, Andrea Beach, our Director of Faculty Development. The team also included executive administrators, faculty, administrative and clerical professionals, graduate and undergraduate students. A special thanks to our Extended University Programs and their Office of Life-Long Education, whose excellent work was instrumental in planning and carry out all the details of this conference.

WMU is triply blessed on this day – to be hosting this important conference, to be celebrating our 2010-11 A.C.E. Fellow, Dr. Susan Stapleton, Associate Dean of Arts and Sciences, and to be honoring Dr. Martha Warfield as a Michigan A.C.E. Network Distinguished Woman awardee. Dr. Warfield’s tireless work certainly exemplifies the conference theme of “lifting as we climb” to create a better future.

I’m sure you are in for a memorable day!

The theme of the conference, “Creating a Better Future: Lifting as we Climb,” stresses how important and essential it is to mentor promising women in the academy. Every talent, from every quarter of our profession must focus now, as never before, on the opportunities we have ahead. We all know there are challenges; I can think of no better group to suggest innovative responses than the A.C.E. Network.

Many of your sessions and activities will focus on the national A.C.E. values that have been developed by the national Office for Women in Higher Education--- an important arm of the American Council on Education. They include identifying, developing, advancing, and supporting women in higher education throughout our state. In other words: nurturing ideas!
Please accept the best wishes from all of us at Western Michigan University for an inspiring and satisfying conference. May this be a day that will launch many new ideas, new relationships, and new solutions. And may it contribute, perhaps in unexpected ways, to your own professional success.

My personal best wishes to each of you. Welcome to the Conference!