

---

July 2014

The Interpretation of Dissolve

Kenneth Jakubas

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.wmich.edu/laureate>

Part of the Poetry Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Jakubas, Kenneth (2014) "The Interpretation of Dissolve," The Laureate: Vol. 11 , Article 5.
Available at: <https://scholarworks.wmich.edu/laureate/vol11/iss1/5>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Lee Honors College at ScholarWorks at WMU. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Laureate by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at WMU. For more information, please contact wmu-scholarworks@wmich.edu.

THE INTERPRETATION OF DISSOLVE

by Kenneth Jakubas

I might be the bedspread—dangling at the edge of your bed: 3:04 in the morning.

October still makes dreams and I must have done something last night, left a window open—yes: a dream swimming stuck with me and Freud never showed himself.

I had a moment upon waking, upon eating away at certain parts:
certain moments of a dream appear in everyday things, link it to Déjà vu, the smell of the familial that I felt and wore before.
The past, never too far behind the window never leaving the frame.

It might have been over breakfast, over morning coffee, that the senses danced, released themselves to the mercy of this dream, a silk thing, like the bedspread after 4 am always a lost memory like the cold October or a basement revisited amidst the must.

Certain movements of a dream appear in everyday occurrences, link it to when you make the bed, the flakes of a dream releasing form, dancing in front of your only pillow—
and the blankets.

The blankets never want to settle.