ALL OF THESE ARE FACTS

by Cameron Decker

Scientists invented yes and no in the 1950's.
Poets are working on maybe.

When choosing soup or salad, I consider the time a friend called me a silly Buddhist and then hung himself.

I don't know the answers, but I hear God's got a killer publishing deal for his theory of the body's electrical grounding. Something about love and the absolute zero of dirt.

Then again, my grandpa climbed telephone poles for a living.

What I mean is, if you stand in line at the patent office long enough, eventually everyone will owe you money.
