President to give 'State of the University' address at 16th annual Academic Convocation

President Haenicke will present the "State of the University" address at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 17, at WMU's 16th annual Academic Convocation in the Dalton Center Recital Hall.

The event, which is open to the public, is intended to recognize and celebrate academic achievement and excellence at the University. It is sponsored by the Office of the Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Provost Nancy S. Barrett will give the welcome at the convocation. Alumni Teaching Excellence Awards will be presented by Robert G. Miller, vice president of the WMU Alumni Association, to Elwood B. Ehrle, biological sciences, and Robert J. Griffin, classics and Spanish.

Distinguished Faculty Scholar Awards will be presented by Barrett to Philip Po-Fang Hsieh, mathematics and statistics, and Michael S. Pritchard, chairperson of philosophy.

Lana L. Boldi, chairperson of the Board of Trustees, will present Distinguished Service Awards to David G. Houghton, political science, and Laura L. Latulippe, Career English Language Center for International Students.

Following the awards ceremony, Haenicke will give the address. The convocation will be followed by a reception in the lobby of the Dalton Center.

The convocation will air live on Kalamazoo Community Access Television Channel 30 and on Channel 36 of EduCABLE, the University's cable television system. It also will be replayed on EduCABLE Channel 36 at noon Wednesday, Oct. 18, and at 3 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 19. The "State of the University" address will be broadcast at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 17, on WMUK-FM (102.1), the University's public radio station.

Senate approves measures on enrollment management

The Faculty Senate Oct. 5 finished work on enrollment management recommendations of its ad hoc Committee on the Directory of Classes by approving one to allow departments with space-limited classes to drop students who do not attend the first class session.

To do so, however, departments must seek approval of the practice through the curriculum review process and indicate in the Directory of Classes which courses are space limited. The recommendation would take effect in fall 1997.

In March and September, the senate approved recommendations of the committee, chaired by Kent Baldner, philosophy, that:

- A supplement to the directory be provided that lists all courses that meet the requirements of the old general education program, the new general education program and the requirements of any college.

- Academic prerequisites continue to be listed in the body of the directory.

- The registrar announce to departments that she will no longer withdraw students from a course before the first day of class to make seats available to other students, such as majors and minors.

- Another ad hoc committee be established to gather information on various enrollment restrictions, such as setting aside seats for certain groups of students, includ-

- Last year, United Way funding provided a safe haven or intervention and counseling services to 13,252 Kalamazoo area residents who were in desperate need of help because of family violence or child abuse.

- In 1994, a total of 43,618 area youth were provided the tools they need to become productive citizens through United Way programs funded by campaign contributions.

- Nearly 3,200 unemployed residents of Kalamazoo County found help and encouragement through employment services and/or vocational rehabilitation services funded by the United Way last year.

Haenicke back at work

President Haenicke has returned to work after suffering a mild heart attack in August. Doctors had advised him to spend several weeks recuperating at home.

"Carol and I want to thank all of you who sent us notes, letters, flowers or who telephoned," Haenicke said, speaking for himself and his wife. "We thoroughly appreciated all good wishes."

Fund-raisers seek $152,000 in campus United Way drive

Donations are already starting to build toward the $152,000 goal for this year's Greater Kalamazoo United Way drive on campus, which began Oct. 4 and runs through Oct. 31.

"In this short time, we will have to respond promptly to the call to give; but, together we will achieve this year's ambitious goal," wrote President Haenicke in a letter sent to employees and endorsed by employee group leaders.

This year's goal represents a 4.7 percent increase over funds raised last year on campus for the local United Way, which supports nearly 60 agencies that provide human services to thousands of individuals and families in Kalamazoo County each year.

A total of 119 fund-raisers from University departments gathered for breakfast Oct. 4 in the Bernhard Center to kick off the campaign. They heard from both a recipient of services and a participant in programs offered through United Way agencies.

"We are asking everyone in the Western family to pledge their support," Haenicke wrote in the letter. "We have a fine tradition of giving at our University, and we want to thank all of you who have given so generously in the past. For those of you who have not participated in the past, we ask you to consider making a campaign contribution this year. Even one dollar per pay period would mean a great deal to those in need who benefit from the United Way." He pointed out that because United Way

Haenicke goes Hollywood

President Haenicke will travel to Los Angeles next week to tape an appearance on "Home Improvement," the top-rated ABC television program that stars Tim Allen, a 1976 WMU communication graduate.

Haenicke, who will play himself, is expected to present Tim Taylor — Allen's character on the show — with an alumni recognition award. Taylor has been identified as a WMU graduate and has worn a WMU sweatshirt on the show at least once each year since the program began in 1992.

"This is fantastic national exposure for the University," said M. Jamie Jeremy, alumni relations, who proposed the idea to Allen's staff this summer. "But I don't think I'll believe it until it happens."

Jeremy said the Alumni Association board had sought to present Allen with a Distinguished Alumni Award this year. But a requirement of the award is to be present at an annual dinner, this year on Oct. 28, which Allen's schedule did not permit.

"So I wrote back, saying that if he could not come here, perhaps we could go there," Jeremy explained. "Taking it a step further, I proposed that Dr. Haenicke appear on the program himself to give Tim Taylor an award for 'Tool Time,' the show-within-a-show cable program the character does."

"The producers wrote back with a very polite 'thanks but no thanks,'" Jeremy continued. "They said they had their own writers and don't accept unsolicited ideas."

Tim Allen

Then, last week, everything changed. "I got a phone call Tuesday morning from a staff member, seeking a little background," Jeremy said. "Then, about two hours later, she called back wanting to know whether Dr. Haenicke could be in California for three days next week."

The president is scheduled to leave Kalamazoo immediately after next Tuesday's Academic Convocation, where he will deliver his annual "State of the University" address. He will join in run-throughs Wednesday, blocking with cameras Thursday and taping Friday, Oct. 18-20.

"They were still working on the story line, so it's not clear how Dr. Haenicke will be involved in the script," Jeremy said. It was not known when the program, which is taped in Burbank, would be broadcast.

CAMPAIGN KICKOFF — A total of 119 fund-raisers from University departments gathered for breakfast in the Bernhard Center Oct. 4 to kick off this year's Greater Kalamazoo United Way campaign on campus. Campaign coordinator Andrew A. Rivers, left, Office of the President, gave some final instructions to fund-raisers Paula Armstrong, speech pathology and audiology, and Peter H. Thompson, residence hall life. This year's campus campaign goal is $152,000.

agencies address a broad range of vital community needs, one in three Kalamazoo County residents will benefit from their services. A number of University employees have been beneficiaries of these services in the past, he wrote.

"We must continue making a difference and you can help by contributing to this campaign," Haenicke concluded. "Although this year will be challenging, Western's active support of this community effort helps to underscore the concern and pride we have for members of the University and Kalamazoo communities. Please join with us in supporting the United Way and in helping to make our campaign a great success!"

Haenicke is showing his support for the United Way in another way this year. He is the chairperson of the community-wide campaign. The goal for that is $6.9 million, a 4.4 percent increase over last year. The theme for this year's campaign is "See, You Can Make a Difference."

SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS — The 18 recipients of this year's $25,000 Medallion Scholarships were honored during a program Oct. 6 in the Bernhard Center. Past recipients, donors, faculty and staff were invited to attend the event. Here, Guido and Elizabeth Binda of Battle Creek greet two students who have received the Medallion Scholarship they funded: Robert J. Vance III, a 1995 recipient from Clarkston who is majoring in music education; and Krista A. McNally, a 1991 recipient from Battle Creek who is majoring in music theory. The event was sponsored by the Office of Development.

WMU starts year with $1 million in new cash gifts

After closing the 1994-95 gift year with a record $8.7 million in cash and deferred gifts, WMU supporters kicked off the new fiscal year with more than $1 million in new cash gifts, the Board of Trustees learned at its Sept. 15 meeting.

Cash gifts of $1,926,740 during June, the final month of the 1994-95 fiscal year, brought to $8,704,496 the total of cash and deferred gifts to the University for the year. Non-cash gifts valued at $891,151 brought the total value of all gifts received in 1994-95 to $9,595,647.

July gifts totaling $247,528 and August gifts amounting to $781,586 put the current year-to-date figure of cash and deferred gifts to the University at $1,029,114, an amount $452,052 higher than last year's figure for the same period.

Major individual gifts recorded during the three-month period included $625,768 from a trust established by the late Gordon H. Sindecuse. The gift will be added to the previously established Gordon H. and Elizabeth M. Sindecuse Health Center Endowment, which provides support for the Sindecuse Health Center. That campus facility was named for the couple after they made a $1 million unrestricted cash

New members invited to APA mixer Friday, Oct. 20

Members of the Administrative Professional Association will get an opportunity to meet new members and visit with returning members during the organization's annual new member mixer from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 20, on the 10th floor of Sprau Tower.

Those attending can enjoy the sunset view of the campus and get to know each other in a relaxed atmosphere, according to Michele McLaughlin-Dondero, APA membership chairperson. Refreshments will be furnished by the organization. For more information about the mixer or becoming an APA member, persons may contact McLaughlin-Dondero at 7-2570.

gift to the University in 1986. Gordon Sindecuse was a resident of Sarasota, Fla., at the time of his 1993 death. Elizabeth Sindecuse died in 1990.

Other major gifts received included $94,500 — $88,000 received in June and $6,500 received in August — from the estate of Rua A. MacDonald. MacDonald earned a teaching certificate from the University in 1919 and a bachelor's degree in 1946. A longtime Grand Rapids resident, MacDonald died in March 1995.

Donations designated to support the University's international efforts were among major cash gifts received during the period. An anonymous $50,000 gift was made to the International Student Services Endowment Fund. Also supporting international efforts was a $12,000 gift from Noriko Takamura of Tokyo. Takamura and her late husband Mamoru Takamura both graduated from WMU. Her gift has been designated for a fund that will be used to contribute to the awareness of Japan on the WMU campus.

H. David and Barbara Wenger of East Lansing contributed $10,000 to the Jennifer C. Wenger Memorial Study/Work Abroad Fund, named in honor of their daughter. Jennifer Wenger graduated from WMU in 1992 and died later that year in an automobile accident. As a student, she had been employed by WMU's Office of International Affairs and had participated in a

Attorney in Allegan County 'right to die' case to present lecture on implications of decision

An attorney who fought to have life support systems turned off for an Allegan County man with severe brain damage will discuss recent legal decisions in the case during a Thursday, Oct. 19, speech in the Fetzner Center auditorium.

Andrew J. Broder, an attorney from Bingham Farms, has served as the lawyer for the injured man's wife, Mary Martin. She has fought unsuccessfully for court permission to remove the life support systems that have kept her husband, Michael Martin, alive since he suffered severe brain damage in a 1987 car/train collision. In a free talk set for 7:30 p.m., Broder will explore the "Implications of the Recent Michigan Supreme Court Decision for Patient Self-Determination."

On Aug. 22, the Michigan Supreme Court ruled 6-1 that Mary Martin had failed to convincingly show that Michael Martin did not wish to continue an existence that made him totally dependent on others or machines to remain alive. She had argued that he had made statements to that effect before being injured. The Supreme Court ruling reversed an earlier appellate court decision in her favor.

In its ruling, the court did recognize a work-study abroad experience.

Also received during the period were three corporate gifts to support a new University/community collaborative effort in Muskegon. Gifts of $15,000 from the Chrysler Corp. of Detroit, $15,000 from Haworth Inc. of Holland and $10,000 from CMI-Dearborn Inc. will help fund a proposed WMU/Muskegon Community College Engineering Initiative aimed at offering a bachelor's degree in manufacturing engineering in Muskegon.

A June gift of $24,000 from the Borgess Service League Inc. of Kalamazoo will benefit WMU's new School of Nursing, which opened its doors to students this year. A payment of $500,000 also was made on an earlier anonymous pledge to support the nursing program. The same anonymous donor made an additional $12,500 pledge payment in support of a WMU Medallion Scholarship. Medallion Scholarships, each worth $25,000 over four years, are among the nation's largest merit awards in higher education.

Corporate matching funds totaling $25,043 were made by the Upjohn Co. Foundation during June and during July that foundation made a $20,000 gift to the University's Annual Fund.

Also reported to the board was a $10,000 gift from Lloyd E. and Nancy Gearhart of Libertyville, Ill. He is a 1992 alumnus of WMU.

patient's right to refuse life sustaining treatment, but set a "clear and convincing evidence" standard that must be met before surrogates may make treatment decisions based on wishes expressed in the past by a patient. Treatment can be refused or withdrawn "only when the patient's prior statements clearly illustrate a serious, well thought out, consistent decision to refuse treatment."

Broder will discuss the legal and ethical issues raised by the case as well as the impact of the court's decision in the Martin case on patient decision-making in Michigan. He will outline documents such as living wills and durable power of attorney designations and describe what must be included in such documents in order to ensure treatment desires are honored.

Broder has argued several other "right to die" cases, including some involving parents' ability to discontinue life sustaining treatment for minor children. He has been involved in the health care field for 22 years and has served as general counsel to a Detroit hospital. He is a founding member of the Children's Hospital Bioethics Committee and a consultant to other Michigan hospitals regarding establishment and operation of bioethics committees and other health care issues. A member of the American Society of Law and Medicine, he is currently the co-chairperson of the Patient Rights Committee of the State Bar of Michigan.

Broder's talk is sponsored by WMU's Center for the Study of Ethics in Society. For more information about the event, persons should contact Shirley Bach, philosophy, at 7-5379.

Hemphill-Pearson named to occupational therapy roster

Barbara J. Hemphill-Pearson, occupational therapy, has been reappointed to the roster of accreditation evaluators for the Accreditation Council for Occupational Therapy Education of the American Occupational Therapy Association.

Originally appointed in 1992, she was again selected to serve in this role after consideration and peer recommendation. She will lead on-site accreditation reviews of occupational therapy curricula.

She also has been appointed to the American Occupational Therapy Certification Board class of 1995 item writers. Only six registered occupational therapists are selected each year for this position, which is responsible for writing questions for the organization's certification examination and developing and implementing policies related to the certification of occupational therapy personnel.

New journal showcases contemporary writers

Well-known creative writers — and those who hope to be — have a new place to get their work published. WMU's Department of English, with the support of the College of Arts and Sciences, has begun publishing "Third Coast," a journal of contemporary literature.

"Our creative writing faculty and creative writing program here at Western are well known throughout the country," says Shirley Clay Scott, chairperson of English. "We needed a creative writing journal issued from here as a cultural expression of what we're doing — a manifestation of our commitment to the arts."

Scott sees "Third Coast" as a natural extension of the University's creative writing program, which hosts annual events like the national Third Coast Writers' Conference. The WMU creative writing program also boasts a highly published faculty who are frequent winners of prestigious Guggenheim and National Endowment for the Arts fellowships.

The first issue of "Third Coast" was published this spring. The 135-page journal, which resembles a softcover book, contains 24 poems and 10 short stories by 20 authors. While Scott says this particular issue is made up entirely of fiction and poetry from the United States and Canada, the journal is open to contemporary literature in all its forms.

"Each issue of the magazine carries with it an invitation to submit from September to May," Scott says. "We welcome all forms of contemporary writing from all over the world."

"Third Coast" is the English department's first attempt to publish a professional literary journal. The editorial board is made up of graduate students in the department's creative writing program; faculty members serve as advisory editors.

Scott says "Third Coast" gives students a wonderful opportunity to learn about publishing. Editors solicit work from well-known writers, but they read and evaluate pieces from new writers as well.

"We're open to all writers," Scott says, "but at the same time we want to make sure we have alluring pieces from established writers who make people want to pick up the magazine." Some of the writers featured in the first edition include Edward Hirsch, Janet Kauffman and Alison Hawthorne Deming.

"Third Coast" managing editor George R. Kuttner, a graduate student in creative writing, says the magazine generated a lot of excitement around the country. "We've had several positive responses to the content and the quality of the magazine," Kuttner says. "We're devoted to making it a magazine that will be recognized on a national scale."

"Third Coast" will be published in the summer and winter. It is available through the Department of English, at local bookstores and by subscription. Subscriptions are $8 per year for two issues, or $5 for individual copies.

A WMU staff member for 14 years, Copeland has worked in the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences for 11 years. She is responsible for overseeing the budget and keeping the dean informed about where the college stands financially. She also keeps track of the dean's schedule. In addition, she helps department chairpersons with contract issues, such as hiring faculty. She spends a considerable amount of time answering questions from faculty, staff and students. "I don't always know how to do something, but I can usually tell people where to get more information," she says. In her other life, Copeland

Where do you go when you need to rebind a 12th century manuscript?

The binding of one of the earliest and most precious manuscripts in the Cistercian Collection in Waldo Library's Special Collections had begun to disintegrate. The manuscript, a Cistercian antiphony containing one of the earliest forms of musical notation, also had a few loose vellum leaves no longer attached to the binding, making it difficult to rebind. Great caution and attention to detail were going to be necessary to avoid losing any of the markings of music.

The Bentley Library at the University of Michigan has a preservation center for the book — one of the best preservation centers in the country. The work could be done for a cost of $1,350. Financial support for the work of rebinding the manuscript was pledged by a generous donor, who wishes to remain anonymous.

The manuscript was hand delivered to the Bentley Library preservation center, where the conservator carefully studied the manuscript, scrupulously noting the construction of the previous binding before taking it apart. After completing the study of the manuscript and with a minimum of repairs, he reassembled the quires and then rebound the book in a simple brown leather binding.

To further protect the newly rebound manuscript, he built a box to hold it. A pocket in the box contains a few scraps of paper inserts and a small strip of an earlier manuscript which had been used in the previous binding. The conservator also inserted a description of what he had done.

The whole process took two years to complete. The conservator ascertained from the pin prick holes he found that this was probably the fourth time the manuscript had been bound. Not bad for 800 years!

CARING ABOUT KIDS — Athletic booster Maurice "Suds" Sumney handed out some hotdogs to hungry kids during a special tailgate party before the Oct. 7 football game. The tailgate was part of the "Care About Kids" program, which is designed to help at-risk children of the greater Kalamazoo and Battle Creek communities. Corporate and individual donations are used to purchase tickets to athletic events at WMU, and the tickets are then given to responsible youth agencies. The goal is to provide the youth with a positive experience while encouraging them to visualize themselves attending college. The program has grown steadily since its inception four years ago. Some 2,500 youngsters are expected to participate this year.

Nominations sought for 1996 faculty scholars

The Distinguished Faculty Scholar Committee is seeking nominations for the 1996 Distinguished Faculty Scholar Awards.
 The deadline for nominations is Friday, Dec. 15. Up to three awards may be made each year. Those honored during this cycle will be announced in fall 1996. Each winner will receive a $2,000 honorarium, a $2,000 adjustment to base salary, a plaque and an opportunity to present a lecture, exhibition or performance for the University community.
 All current, continuing board-appointed persons with faculty rank are eligible, including part-time as well as full-time faculty. They must have at least seven academic years of service to WMU prior to nomination. No individual may receive the award more than once.
 The awards are based on outstanding professional achievement. The accomplishments may be artistic, historical, literary, philosophical, scientific or technical. Wide recognition beyond WMU is essential. The award usually will be based on a body of achievement, rather than a particular piece of work, and a substantial part of the achievement must have been accomplished as a WMU faculty member.

 Any member of the University community, including retirees, may nominate a faculty member for the award. All nominations must be supported by a minimum of two sponsors, at least one of whom is from within the University.
 Guidelines and nomination forms have been distributed on campus. For more information, persons may contact Ernst A. Breisach, history, who is chairing the committee, at 7-4637. Additional information forms are available in the provost's office.

ing majors and minors, to determine which practices are appropriate.
 In other action, the senate accepted a report by its ad hoc Committee on Priorities of Placement Services in a Changing University, which was chaired by Philip J. Egan, English.
 The committee's primary recommendation is that the University "maintain and strengthen centralized placement services by strengthening staffing in career services and investing in appropriate technology."
 Three new professional staff positions already had been authorized for career services, bringing the total to six professional staff positions. The office also has been authorized to purchase computers, other equipment and software.
 Senate recommendations are sent to the administration for its consideration.
