Winter enrollment down slightly from last year, on-campus minority/international numbers up

Enrollment for the winter semester at the University is 25,650, down slightly from last winter’s record enrollment of 26,226.

The 223 student figures are enrolled on campus, 1.6 percent fewer than last winter’s figure of 22,671 students. Off-campus or commuting education was down this winter to 5,332 students, an 8.8 percent decrease from 3,655 students in 1992.

Forbeses are continuing trend from last fall, with larger classes of juniors and seniors and smaller classes of freshmen and sophomores, due to the declining number of high school seniors.

The breakdown by classes for this winter’s total enrollment, with last winter’s figure in parentheses, is: freshmen, 3,009 (3,013); sophomores, 3,536 (3,791); juniors, 5,147 (5,670); seniors, 7,341 (6,967); graduate students 6,354 (6,673); and others, 263 (267).

Despite the slight decrease in on-campus enrollment, the number of minority and international students is up over winter 1992. Minority on-campus enrollment is 1,915 students, an increase of 10 percent over last winter’s figure of 1,741 students. Minority students represent 6.5 percent of the total on-campus winter enrollment.

A total of 1,593 international students represent 88 percent of the increase in on-campus classes this winter. That figure is up 7.5 percent from last winter’s total of 1,486 international students, representing 80 countries. International students represent 7.1 percent of the total on-campus winter enrollment.

Sharma, Ellin nominated for election to top senate offices

Visho Sharma, science studies, and Joseph S. Elin, philosophy, have been nominated to one-year terms as president and vice president, respectively, of the Faculty Senate for 1993-94.

Sharma would replace Ellen K. Page-Robitaille, who served as vice president this year and is chairperson of the Undergraduate Studies Council.

Ellin currently serves as chairperson of the Regional Education Council and is a senate representative to the Campus III Advisory Board.

In addition, it was announced that three faculty members were nominated by petition to three year terms as senators-at-large. They are Peter K. Kowatschke, languages and linguistics; E. Thomas Lawson, citizenship and Judaic studies; and Jerome W. Bohn, government and political science.

Nominations for the two top offices were conducted during the senate’s Feb. 4 meeting. The March election is scheduled to begin by mail this week. Elections for senate representatives are under way in several departments while elections in other departments have been completed. Ballots are due to the senate office by Feb. 22.

New constitution and bylaws on agenda for APA meeting

The approval of a revised constitution and bylaws is on the agenda for the Tuesday, Feb. 16, general business meeting of the Administrative Professional Association. The meeting will run from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. in the Red Rooms of the Bernhard Center.

Also on the agenda are updates on the association’s participation in University-wide focus groups and on the group’s community service project.

Reception planned for Smith

A reception honoring the retirement of Dean Geoffrey A. Smith, continuing education, is scheduled for 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Feb. 22, in the President’s Dining Room of the Bernhard Center. The University community is invited to attend. Smith will retire after 15 years of service to the University.

Boston University economist to discuss global competition

"Can America's Human Resources System Survive Globalization?" will be the title of a lecture to be presented at the University of Western Ontario on February 17.

Peter B. Doering, an expert in economics at Boston University, will speak in 3750 Knauss Hall. He will also lead a seminar on "Should States Compete for Japanese Manufacturing Plants?" that day at 3 p.m. in 3700 Knauss Hall.

The free talks will be of special interest to area audiences, in light of the recently announced plans by Toyota to build a plant in Ontario.

Doering is an expert on economic development, manpower economics, and international and unionized labor markets. A faculty member at Boston University since 1974, he also has taught at Harvard University. He has directed the Institute for Employment Policy Research at Boston U. and headed the Institute in manpower administration at Harvard.

The author or editor of 10 books and four monographs, Doering has received support for his work from several government agencies and non-profit foundations, including the W.E. Upjohn Institute for Employment Research in Kalamazoo. He also has served as a labor arbitrator, fact finder and member or chairperson of a number of manpower advisory committees at the state and national levels.

The talks are part of the Department of Economics' series of lectures on topics of special interest to practitioners and policymakers. The series is intended to explore recent trends and new guidelines for development from national and international perspectives. Supported by a grant from the Upjohn Institute, the series is directed by Huang and Sisay Asefa, economics.

Telephone workshop offered

An overview of the telephone features as well as tips and techniques for increasing productivity will be presented in a workshop. "Telephones: Getting the Most for Your Money," Tuesday, Feb. 23.

The workshop will take place in 208 Bernhard Center. A session from 9 to 10:30 a.m. will cover single line telephones, and a session from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. will focus on multiline telephones.

Features to be discussed and demonstrated include call screening, call waiting, buddy call, voice mail. To register, persons should contact the Department of Telecommunications at 7-0918.

years," Edwards said. The current graduation rate for students at WMU is 40 percent, just under the 50 percent rate at large public universities but below the Mid-American Conference average.

Edwards presented material on cost containment in athletics. Efforts include reducing graduation rates for the length of the playing season, the number of contests and the number of coaches, among others. He discussed the emerging issue of gender equity.

BLOOD PRESSURE SCREENING — Sarah McMillan, right, a freshman from Detroit, is one of 60 certified testiners who are visiting 20 sites on campus this week and next as part of the annual Campus Wide Blood Pressure Screening and Education Program. Here, he checks to make sure Amy J. Trinkle, a sophomore from Decatur, has blood pressure in the healthy range. The program, sponsored by University Wellness Programs in the Sincadece Health Center, offers blood pressure assessments as well as preventive health education. See the calendar on page four for times, dates and locations of screenings.

800 expected to compete for Medallion awards

The cream of the crop this year's high school graduating classes will be at WMU Saturdays, Feb. 13 and 20, to compete for scholarships valued at more than $1 million to attend the University this fall.

About 800 high school seniors — 400 on each date — will participate in this year's Medallion Scholarship Competition. Some 1,000 of their parents also will attend to participate in information sessions and other activities.

This is the ninth year for the event, which will draw students from Michigan as well as other states. The students are competing for some of the largest merit scholarships in American public higher education.

Nigerian scholar to speak

A scholar from Nigeria will discuss "Yoruba Survivals in African-American Folkways" in a lecture at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 17, in 3750 Knauss Hall.

Bade Ajayon, professor and director of the Institute of Cultural Studies at Obafemi Awolowo University, will present the free talk. A visiting international scholar at WMU this winter, he has researched and published widely on folklorists in Africa and recently has conducted research on traditional medicine and folklore.

The lecture is being sponsored by the Office of International Affairs and will be followed by a reception in 2000 Friedmann Hall. Students who are eligible to earns a variety of topics related to African folklore and culture. Persons may contact him in the Department of History at 4-6655.

"Gender equity is going to be a major theme in the next five years," he told the senate, indicating that a review of the issue represents a number of variables. They include participation ratios, financial support of programs, budget trends, salaries, personnel and team travel.

Other factors include administrative support, courtesy vehicles, facilities, supplies and equipment, academic support services and staff, media, booster organizations and promotional events, and game administration and media management.

Edwards said his report on gender equity would be presented to the Athletic Board in 60 days and the recommendations of the board will be presented at meetings of the Mid-American Conference in June in preparation for the next NCAA meetings in January, where positions on the issue could be developed and adopted.

He discussed minority participation in athletics, indicating that blacks make up 26.7 percent of participants at WMU, 4.4 percent greater than the NCAA average of 22.3 percent.

"This is a positive picture for WMU," Edwards said. "It means that WMU provides the opportunity to attend college to that many more minority students, who might otherwise not be able to attend."
Week planned to recognize student employees

The University will recognize an important part of its force: Feb. 15-19. That's the annual Student Employment Week, during which the campus community takes note of the contributions student employees make to the overall success of the institution.

"I urge the University community to join with me in recognizing these thousands of college students, employers and supervisors who have participated in the cooperative venture of employing students and the special role that they play in the development of educated and motivated citizens," said President Haenicke in a resolution proclaiming the week.

According to Lynn C. Bryan, student employment referral service, about 7,000 students work on campus each year. In January, her office wrote to University department and encouraged them to recognize their student employees by ordering a certificate from her office.

"We've had 800 requests from 94 different departments," she says. "That's more than twice as many requests as we've received before.

Departments can still order certificates by calling the student employment referral service at 7-2725. Bryan suggests that departments use the certificates in coordination with other tokens of appreciation, such as a personal note of thanks, a gift card, etc.

"This is our opportunity to say thank you," she says. "Student employees bring much to our department, and to our lives; their role is a unique one."

Other events planned for the week include the annual Summer Employment Day and an internship workshop, both sponsored by the student employment referral service and set for Thursday, Feb. 18.

More than 2,000 students are expected for the Summer Employment Day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Ballroom of the Bernhard Center. Some 100 employers will be recruiting students for such jobs as ambush park attendants, camp counselors and clerical workers as well as summer internships. The free event is open to all area high school and college students.

The internship workshop is scheduled for 2 p.m. in 212 Bernhard Center.

For more information about Student Employment Week events, persons may contact the student employment referral service at 7-2725.

Experts to debate solutions to criminal violence

Criminal violence in Kalamazoo County will be the focus of a program at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 25, in the Fetzer Center.

Experts will debate strategies for curbing criminal violence and ideas will be sought from the community in the session, which is being organized by the Forum for Kalamazoo Foundation, the Fetzer Institute, the Kalamazoo County Office of the Prosecutor and the Kalamazoo Mayor's Office.

Experts to debate solutions to criminal violence will speak about the effectiveness of deterrence; G. Froehlke of the National Center for Disaster psychology will speak about prevention.

Experts to debate solutions to criminal violence is scheduled to air Saturday, Feb. 13, at 2886 after 6 p.m.

On campus

Working his way up — John D. Satterfield began working at WMU in 1971 as an apprentice painter. After being promoted to paint supervisor and then general supervisor last year, he now oversees painters and other skilled trades workers as an assistant manager of maintenance for the physical plant.

He's responsible for two multi-craft shops — one in the physical plant and one in the Dalton Center. The electricians, plumbers, carpenters, painters, carpenters/tellers, roofers and other skilled workers are supervised.

Satterfield takes care of maintenance and repairs in many of the buildings on campus. "I oversee the budget for all those trades," Satterfield says. "I also visit building coordinators to see if there are any problems and, through the supervisors of those shops, ensure proper materials and tools are available to do the work."

Satterfield is primarily responsible for work in the office and classroom buildings on campus. He also coordinates any work that outside contractors might be hired to do on those buildings. Between 7,000 and 10,000 work orders pass through his office each year. In his spare time, Satterfield says serving as a trustee for his church and spending time outside on the 10 acres where he lives near Battle Creek. "I guess I'd say faith in God and hard work has gotten me where I am today," he says.
