Haenicke a finalist for UMass chancellorship

President Haenicke told key members of his staff March 12 that he is one of four finalists for chancellor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

"Carol and I have not yet made up our minds," he said in an e-mail message. "You all know how much we are dedicated to our University and to this community. But it invigorates me to realize that my work here and my past experience still moves me among the finalists in a broad national search at a top flight institution."

Haenicke said that he also has been invited to be a candidate for chancellor at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. That search is just getting under way.

James S. Brady of Grand Rapids, chairperson of the Board of Trustees, issued this statement March 15:

"It is not surprising to (members of the board) that President Haenicke is being seriously considered for the position of chancellor as well as other presidencies of some of this country's most prestigious universities.

"President Haenicke has taken the University to heights that it has not known before his tenure. Under his leadership, the Campaign for Excellence was able to raise $62 million for capital and other improvements on the campus. Faculty, alumni and student relationships have been strong. The University's research capabilities have been recognized by the Carnegie Foundation, and we are now considered one of Michigan's research-intensive universities—all of these to the credit of our president, Diether Haenicke.

"The Board of Trustees hopes his decision is to stay and lead the University into the '90s so that the goal of becoming one of this country's truly outstanding academic universities can be achieved under his leadership. President Haenicke and his wife, Carol, have become leading citizens of the Kalamazoo and Western Michigan community. We do not want them to leave. We hope they do not leave. We hope that the many friendships they have made during their time with us and their achievements will convince them to stay."

Roy S. Roberts resigns from Board of Trustees

Roy S. Roberts has resigned from the Board of Trustees because his responsibilities as General Motors' GMC Truck general manager demand his full attention and preclude him from providing the necessary concentrated attention to the University, he said.

Roberts

In a letter to Trustee Chairperson James S. Brady, Roberts said, "It is very difficult for me to submit...my resignation.... I regret that I am no longer able to serve...in the capacity I feel it requires. I believe my decision is in the best interests of WMU and General Motors."

A WMU alumnus, Roberts of Bloomfield Hills was appointed by Gov. John Engler to the WMU governing board in January 1991. He had just rejoined General Motors in 1990 as manufacturing manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Division after having served as vice president and general manager of truck operations of Navistar International Transportation Corp. He was vice president of personnel administration and development in 1988 when he left GM for Navistar. He was promoted to his current post last October.

Roberts told Brady that he had valued his board experience and that he had found it "both personally and professionally rewarding. I am grateful to have had the opportunity to serve this great University which has provided so much to me over the years and continues to be an important part of my lifetime experience.... Western Michigan University, President Diether Haenicke, the students and faculty all deserve the same kind of concentrated attention" that he finds he must give to his GM responsibilities.

"My board colleagues, the University family and I will certainly miss Roy Roberts' expertise and loyalty to WMU," Brady said. "We are grateful for the short time we have had together, pleased that he has pledged his continued support for his alma mater, and wish him much success with his key efforts to help restore GM's health to the great corporation it has been for many decades."

"I am disappointed that Roy Roberts cannot fill out his board term because he has been an active and supportive alumnus for many years, but I certainly understand the pressing demands that his latest GM promotion has placed on him," Haenicke said. "We wish him well with his many challenges."

Engler will appoint a new trustee to fill Roberts' term on the WMU governing board; that term will expire in 1998.

Board meeting set for Detroit

The Board of Trustees will meet at 10 a.m. Friday, March 19, in the Landmark Room of the Omni Hotel at 333 E. Jefferson in Detroit.

The agenda includes action related to the University's proposed research and business park. In addition, the board will consider a schedule of room and board and apartment rental rates for 1993-94, which is expected to be tabled until the board's April 23 meeting.

These board committee meetings also are scheduled for Friday in the Landmark Room: Academic and Student Affairs Committee at 8:45 a.m.; and Budget and Finance Committee at 9 a.m. All meetings are open to the public.

Three to be honored with 'Woman of the Year' awards

A recently retired faculty member and two graduate students have been selected to receive the "Woman of the Year" award presented by WMU's Commission on the Status of Women.

Clare R. Goldfarb, emerita in English, Joanne Dodgson, a third-year doctoral student in counselor education and counseling psychology, and Monica M. White, a second-year master's student in sociology, will be recognized at an awards luncheon at noon Friday, March 26, in the West Ballroom of the Bernhard Center.

The award, which has been given annually since 1978, is intended to recognize outstanding women employees and students at WMU and to increase awareness of the variety of their achievements.

Goldfarb, a WMU faculty member from 1961 to 1992, was the first woman chairperson of the Department of English when she served in the post from 1978 to 1982. She was associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences from 1984 to 1986.

Goldfarb was chosen by the awards committee not only for her considerable accomplishments, but also for her years as a mentor and role model for female colleagues and students. She is described by one who nominated her for the award as "a woman of strength, integrity and compassion (who) became for me, and for others of my female colleagues, a model of what an academic woman can accomplish."

Over the years, Goldfarb taught classes on American literature, American poetry, literary interpretation and essay writing. She has published articles on American writers William Dean Howells and Henry James and Russian writers Leo Tolstoy and Alexander Solzhenitsyn. She is the co-author of the book, "Spiritualism and 19th Century Letters."

During her tenure at the University, she worked to promote the cause of women in the profession. She presented workshops on such topics as career opportunities for women and balancing careers and families. In 1982, she served on a University-wide Committee for Administrative and Faculty Internships for Women and Minorities. She also served on several other committees for the University and its chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Numerous letters of testimony from former students and professional colleagues submitted with her nomination attest to Goldfarb's positive impact on their lives. "I know of no one in the University who has spent as many hours as Clare advising women, encouraging the development of their work, nurturing their success, and offering strategies they might use as women to survive and do well," said a colleague.

Dodgson

Dodgson was selected as a "Woman of the Year" award recipient in recognition of her considerable contributions and accomplishments in the area of sexual assault education and counseling. As a graduate assistant with the WMU Women's Center and now with WMU Women's Resources and Services, she has served as coordinator of the Sexual Assault Education Project since its inception in September 1990.

This year, Dodgson and a team of 12 male and female student peer educators will provide educational programs about acquaintance and date rape to some 3,000 students. "Her dedication, her willingness to give her time, her skills and personal attributes as an effective communicator, team-builder and trainer, her extensive knowledge of and sensitivity to all aspects of the issue of sexual assault and abuse, her vision of and determination to create an effective sexual assault education program at Western ... have been instrumental in building a program at WMU that is highly regarded, in great demand by students, staff and faculty, and has positively touched many students' lives," said a colleague in nominating her for the award.

Dodgson also serves as a sexual assault victim advocate for Women's Resources and Services and counsels sexual assault survivors through WMU's Counseling and Psychological Services. In addition to her work at WMU, Dodgson has been a consultant at Kalamazoo College. She has presented workshops there on acquaintance rape prevention and gender issues and sexuality as well as assisted with the development of a peer educator program and sexual assault prevention efforts.

Also active in the community, Dodgson has served as a co-therapist and as a counselor in the Kalamazoo YWCA's Sexual Assault Program. She has been a volunteer co-facilitator for a women with HIV support group for Kalamazoo AIDS Resources and Education Services. She has made presentations on date rape and other topics at several regional and national conferences.

Dodgson received the Kenneth B. Engle Doctoral Student Award in 1992 from the WMU Department of Counselor Education and Counseling Psychology and the Outstanding Student in Psychology Award in 1991 from the Western Michigan Psycho-

NEW SKYLIGHTS — Read Fieldhouse currently looks like it has hundreds of skylights, due to the removal of the building's old roof. The roof work is part of the $50 million renovation and expansion of WMU's facilities for student recreation and intercollegiate athletics. Structural steel will soon be going up to support a new metal roof system, according to Peter J. Strazdas, campus planning, engineering and construction. In addition to work on the roof, foundations are being installed for additions on the east and west sides of the building. The foundation for a three-story complex on the interior of the north side of the building also is being put in place. The structural steel for that complex as well as the precast structure for the stands should be installed sometime in May.

Barrett has 'open door' policy to promote communication

The Office of Academic Affairs might be better named faculty affairs given the commitment of Provost Nancy S. Barrett to be accessible to anyone concerned about the instructional programs at WMU.

As the institution's chief academic officer, Barrett is responsible for making faculty appointment, merit adjustment, promotion and tenure recommendations to the president.

In a recent interview, Barrett also discussed doctoral programs, administrative searches, the academic planning forums and access with students. She stressed that "it's important to keep in mind all of the progress that has been made despite the financial constraints, and that's because of the hard work that continues to be put forth by the faculty, staff, students and administration."

"I hope that the faculty remember that my office door is always open," she said. "I do a lot of different things to maintain communications with the faculty." She meets at least twice each semester with the Faculty Senate executive board; she meets every other week with the president of the Faculty Senate; she

WSA faculty evaluation will not be used for reviews

Provost Nancy S. Barrett and Lynwood H. Bartley, president of the WMU chapter of the American Association of University Professors, issued this statement on March 10 in a letter to members of the University community:

"Western Michigan University and the Western Michigan University chapter of the American Association of University Professors agree that the published results of the WSA (Western Student Association) faculty evaluation entitled 'Grade the Professors' will not be used in any formal or informal review of faculty. Specifically, the use of this information will not be permitted as a part of the tenure, promotion or merit reviews."

Questions concerning this matter may be addressed to Bartley at 345-0151 or to Carol L. Stamm, assistant vice president for academic affairs, at 7-2382.

Former faculty member to speak as part of Whitney M. Young Jr. Scholars Program

A look at what's in store for social workers in the 1990s will be provided in talks sponsored by the University Monday and Tuesday, March 22-23.

Samuel O. Miller, associate professor of social work at Columbia University, will speak on "Whitney Young Remembered: Projections for the 1990s." He will deliver the address at 7 p.m. Monday at WMU's Grand Rapids Regional Center, 2333 East Beltline S.W. and at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the West Ballroom of the Bernhard Center. The lectures are free and open to the public.

The Tuesday event will mark the 22nd annual Whitney M. Young Jr. Scholars Program at WMU. Minority students will be recognized with awards for their scholastic achievement and significant service activities.

The program was established by the WMU School of Social Work in 1971 as a memorial to Young, an internationally known social worker who died that year. At the time of his death, he was the executive director of the National Urban League. As president of the National Association of Social Workers, Young was the convocation speaker at the dedication of WMU's School of Social Work in 1968.

Miller was a social work faculty member has tried to meet with every academic department once a year; she meets every two weeks with American Association of University Professors representatives Lynwood H. Bartley, Gary Mathews and Roberta M. Supnick; and she meets a couple of times each semester with the entire executive board of the AAUP. "They are easy to work with and we have had some interesting and frank discussions," Barrett said.

Some of the topics that have been discussed with the AAUP are faculty appointment classifications, teaching evaluation, supplemental employment, personnel files, departmental policy statements, workload and committee membership, she said.

"These are very informal meetings with no fixed agenda," she explained. "We tend to discuss broad, long-term issues and to hear each others' points of view about the contract and the wisdom of going in a particular direction. We can often resolve issues immediately."

"These issues are often just a communications problem," Barrett observed. "The majority of cases result from a communications breakdown somewhere and our meeting can reopen those channels. Every once in a while there's a potential grievance which we can resolve without a formal procedure and we save a tremendous amount of work for all of us. It's a very collegial atmosphere."

Barrett reported that she will be taking the economics doctoral degree program proposal to the state's academic officers later this month and that there are proposals from the biological sciences department and from mechanical and aeronautical engineering that are working their way through the internal WMU approval process.

As for searches, she indicated that the Lee Honors College dean search is an internal (on-campus) one; that the committee has identified a short list of Graduate College dean candidates and references are now being checked; a national consultant is being used for the library dean search and a pool of about 40 candidates has been assembled; at WMU from 1970 to 1973. He is nationally known for his work in the area of community mental health practice with particular emphasis in social service delivery to minority families. In recent years, Miller has focused his research on survivors of persons with AIDS.

His lectures are being sponsored by the Visiting Scholars and Artists Program in conjunction with the School of Social Work.

The Visiting Scholars and Artists Program was established in 1960 and has supported more than 430 visits by scholars and artists representing more than 65 academic disciplines. The chairperson of the committee that oversees the program is Marcia A. Kingsley, University libraries.

Young to discuss memories of the Holocaust March 23

"The Landscape of Memory: Holocaust Memorials in History" is the topic of a lecture scheduled for 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 23, in 2303 Sangren Hall.

James Young, professor of English and Judaic studies at the University of Massachusetts, will discuss how knowledge of the Holocaust comes from stories and images from survivors, historians, artists, poets and novelists. He will tell some of these stories and ask the audience to think about the meaning of the Holocaust.

Widely known for his scholarship in Holocaust studies, Young has written numerous articles and book chapters on that topic. He is the author of the books, "Writing and Rewriting the Holocaust" and "The Texture of Memory: Holocaust Memorials and Meaning in Europe, Israel and America."

The event is being organized by the Days of Remembrance Planning Committee of the Kalamazoo Consortium for Higher Education. The consortium, comprised of WMU, Kalamazoo Valley Community College, Kalamazoo College and Davenport College, has sponsored events to commemorate the Holocaust and its 6 million victims each year since 1986.

there's an internal (on-campus) search under way for the director of the Division of Minority Affairs; and an ad has just been placed in the Chronicle of Higher Education for the registrar's search.

Barrett attended nine of the 11 academic planning forums conducted by the Committee to Advise the President on Priorities in the Academic Areas, which she chairs. She expressed disappointment over the attendance, but added, "The dialogues that were engendered were excellent, and we got a good cross section of people at each forum. In addition, we have received some good written presentations."

She believes the forums were a very good concept. She indicated that her committee held six two-hour meetings before the forums to identify the topics and questions to be covered at each forum. She and her committee will now develop and put a set of recommendations together for President Haenicke.

As for access with students, Barrett meets once a month with the Western Student Association president and she has set up WSA liaisons with each college dean. She has a confer on the WSA Forum, and she receives e-mail from students on a daily basis. She is teaching Economics 501—"The Economics of Gender"—from 4 to 6:30 p.m. Mondays in the Lee Honors College.

"I spend a lot of time after class discussing student life issues with my students, and was enormously flattered when two of them invited me to come to their house on a Sunday to talk with their friends," she concluded.

Award-winning radio producer to give lecture

An audio expert known for bringing the sounds of the planet to radio listeners around the world will speak at the University at 3 p.m. Wednesday, March 24, in 1118 Rood Hall.

Jim Metzner, executive producer of the syndicated radio series "Pulse of the Planet,"

Search committee sets forum

The search committee for the dean of the Lee Honors College has scheduled an open forum for Thursday, March 18, with candidate Joseph G. Reish. The meeting will run from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Lee Honors College Lounge.

Reish was named interim dean of the Lee Honors College this past July. He served as associate dean from 1988 to 1992 and as assistant director in 1987-88. A WMU faculty member since 1972, he holds a concurrent appointment as a professor of French.

The search committee will solicit written comments from those attending the forum. Additional written comments may be sent to any member of the committee: Interim Dean Lowell E. Crow, Haworth College of Business, chairperson; Joseph S. Ellin, philosophy; Elizabeth R. Skidmore, a Lee Honors College student; and Ralph Tanner, engineering technology.

Pretty elected president and CEO of WMU Foundation

Keith A. Pretty was elected president and chief executive officer of the WMU Foundation during a Feb. 26 meeting of the executive committee of the foundation's board of directors.

Pretty

Pretty, who also serves as WMU vice president for external affairs and general counsel, becomes the foundation's fourth president, replacing L. Michael Moskovis, who resigned from that position Dec. 31, 1992. Pretty's current term will expire at the September 1993 annual meeting of the WMU Foundation. He is expected to be re-elected to a full one-year term at that time.

Moskovis had served as president of the foundation since 1990. He resigned to return to the faculty following the successful completion of the Campaign for Excellence, the largest fund-raising effort in WMU history. That campaign concluded in October 1992, 15 months ahead of schedule and 13 percent above its goal, with a total of $62 million raised.

The WMU Foundation was established in 1976 "to promote and to provide private financial support for Western Michigan University." All gifts to the University are received through the WMU Foundation, which is governed by a board of directors composed of 42 business and civic leaders.

will deliver a lecture and sound program on "The Art of Listening." The event is free and open to the public.

Since 1979, Metzner has produced more than 1,500 short format radio programs distributed nationally as part of series titled "You're Hearing America," "Sounds of Science" and, since 1990, "Pulse of the Planet." His work has been featured on the "CBS Evening News" and National Public Radio's "All Things Considered," and has garnered a number of broadcasting awards.

The event is being sponsored by the Direct Encounter With the Arts Program in the College of Fine Arts and the Department of Geology and Department of Science Studies in the College of Arts and Sciences. For more information about the event, persons may contact Richard J. de Peaux, art and humanities, at 7-5387.

Gospel musical planned

The Voices of WMU Gospel Choir will present a musical, "Gospel Music 101: Education in Salvation," at 7 p.m. Friday, March 26, in the South Ballroom of the Bernhard Center. Gospel choirs from other state universities have been invited to attend the event, which is free and open to the public.

GEARING UP FOR FITNESS WALK

Representatives of the Administrative Professional Association and Clerical/Technical Organization were gearing up earlier this week for the third annual APA-C/TO Step Into Spring Fitness Walk scheduled for noon Friday, March 19. Working out on the treadmill are, from left: Christine M. McDowell, grants and contracts; Pat J. Stafford, telecommunications; Ruth E. Mader, Bernhard Center; and Dawn J. Papesch, University Wellness Programs. The walk, which will begin in the Sindecuse Health Center lobby, is open to the University community as part of the eighth annual Spring Into Wellness Week March 15-20. Coordinated by University Wellness Programs in the Sindecuse Health Center, the week will conclude with such events as noon-hour seminars on Thursday and Friday as well as a "Jump Rope for Heart" activity Saturday. For more information about Spring Into Wellness events, persons may call 7-3263.

Admissions staff targets high school juniors with revamped on-campus recruitment program

Because high school students are deciding where they want to attend college earlier than in past years, WMU is changing the schedule and format for its largest on-campus recruitment event to meet their needs.

WMU has invited all high school juniors in the state to "Gold Pride Preview" on Saturday, March 20. This event replaces "Brown and Gold Day," which was open to high school seniors and took place each fall.

"It's a fact that students are beginning to think about college choices much earlier in high school," said Stanley E. Henderson, admissions and orientation. "Previously, students didn't think seriously about college until they were seniors, so Brown and Gold Day made sense."

"Now, they're thinking about these decisions during their junior year," he continued. "Research indicates that they may not have decided exactly where they're going to college by the end of their junior year, but they have decided where they're applying by that time."

WMU expects between 2,000 and 3,000 students and parents for Gold Pride Preview. Registration will run from 8 to 10 a.m. in the Bernhard Center.

In addition to having information about academic programs and student services available in one location, as was done at Brown and Gold Day, WMU students will be taking the participants out into the various buildings on campus to experience the atmosphere.

"GoldPride Preview will have much more of an open house format," says Terri S. Harris, admissions and orientation, who is coordinator of the event. "Students and parents will be able to get a feel for our programs by actually going out to the facilities that house those programs and talking to WMU students and faculty members."

From 9 to 11 a.m., participants will be able to browse in the Bernhard Center. Each of WMU's six academic colleges will be represented as well as many of the student services: financial aid, admissions, residence halls, student life, academic support and others.

From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., students and their parents will be able to tour other areas, including academic buildings, an electronic classroom, laboratories, performing arts facilities, Waldo Library, residence halls, the Computing Center and the Sindecuse Health Center. Students, faculty and staff will be on hand to discuss programs, give demonstrations and answer questions.

While this on-campus recruitment event has been moved up to spring, other admissions activities for seniors will still be available in the fall, Henderson says. The Office of Admissions and Orientation offers programs and tours on designated Fridays and Saturdays. Meetings with faculty members can be arranged in advance.

The Office of Admissions and Orientation also plans to offer an on-site admissions program on one Saturday this fall. This program, which formerly was part of Brown and Gold Day, allows students who bring completed applications and transcripts to campus to find out the same day whether or not they have been admitted. The process normally takes four to six weeks.

State dept. interpreter to speak

Harry Obst, director of the Office of Language Services for the U.S. Department of State, will speak at WMU Monday, March 22. He will discuss "University Programs for Translation and Interpretation: A Case of Academic Negligence" at 3 p.m. in the Lee Honors College.

Obst, who has served six U.S. presidents as their German interpreter, will discuss the need for more programs in the United States to train professional translators or interpreters.

"WMU's Translation Center has been, during the past decade, a quiet yet significant national voice in support of improved training in 'practical' translation and interpretation," said Peter W. Krawutschke, languages and linguistics, who is coordinating the visit.

Media

Ralph C. Chandler, political science and public affairs, discusses communitarianism, a new political movement, on "Focus," a five-minute interview produced by news services. "Focus" is scheduled to air Saturday, March 20, at 6:10 a.m. on WKPR-AM (1420).

On campus

ASSISTING GRADUATE STUDENTS — Kathleen M. Coolman says she likes the "helping" aspect of her job as an administrative assistant in the Graduate College. She's responsible not only for handling the Graduate College budget, but also for monitoring the financial assistance the college provides to graduate students. She coordinates the processing of some 900 appointments or reappointments of graduate assistants from throughout the University each year. "I like helping graduate students and being able to give them information that is helpful to them," she says. "Sometimes they just need a little inside help." Coolman understands some of the challenges facing students — she is hoping to complete her bachelor of business administration degree this fall. A WMU employee for six years, she worked at WMUK-FM for two and a half years before joining the Graduate College staff. "I like working for a university because of the atmosphere," she says. "I have worked at a lot of places, and I think higher education is the best — it's a good thing to be focused on."

Service

These employees are recognized for five, 10, 15, 20, 25 and 30 years of service to the University in March:

30 years — Gordon D. Grimm, public safety.

25 years — Eddie Corner, physical plant-B/E maintenance; and Paul Montz, physical plant-L/G maintenance.

20 years — Nancy F. Crowell, Sara Swickard Preschool; Tony E. Griffin, WMUK-FM; and Rodney Wade, physical plant-building custodial and support services.

15 years — Carol L. Farrance, WMU apartments; and Michael P. McDonnell, Waldo Library.

10 years — Patricia M. Guenther, WESTOPS; and Janice J. Van Der Kley, assistant vice president for finance.

Five years — Francine L. Adams, telecommunications; John M. Barney, physical plant-B/E maintenance; Mohamed Bouallam, University computing services; Velois Bowers, human resources; Linda D. Burnside, public safety; Mary J. DeRoo, University computing services; Willie J. Harrell, physical plant-B/E maintenance; Hans J. Kruissel, physical plant-B/E maintenance; Amy M. Logan, telecommunications; Elaine C. Potgiesser, telecommunications; Yvonne R. Rumery, collective bargaining and contract administration; Richard A. Santman, physical plant-B/E maintenance; Barney Stockwell, physical plant-B/E maintenance; and Albert C. Whitlock, physical plant-B/E maintenance.

Obituary

Donald N. Scott, a WMU retiree, died March 13 in Kalamazoo. He was 88.

Scott retired from the University in 1969 as director of the University Student Center (now the Bernhard Center) and residence halls. He came to the University in 1943 as an athletic trainer and teacher to work with the Navy V-5 and U-12 units.

In 1948, he was selected as director of Walwood Union on East Campus. When the University Student Center was completed on West Campus in 1957, he became director of that building as well as of the residence halls. Shortly before he retired, he was honored for his service to his profession with life membership in the Association of College Unions.

Also active in the community, Scott served as president of the Kalamazoo Lions Club, as trustee and business manager of the First Presbyterian Church and as board member for Friendship Village.

Memorial contributions may be made to the First Presbyterian Church or the Friends Fund at Friendship Village.

logical Association.
 White is being recognized for her many contributions both at the University and in the community over a very short time. Although she has lived in Kalamazoo and attended WMU only since 1991, she has compiled quite a list of accomplishments.

She is a highly visible role model for women students as chairperson of the Graduate Student Advisory Committee, an organization that advocates on behalf of graduate students at WMU. She began working with that group as co-chairperson in January 1992 and assumed its sole leadership this past August.

"She has proved herself to be an effective, confident leader in a campus-wide role," said one person in nominating her for the award. "Monica is a 'grass-roots' organizer who is very much in touch with her many constituents and constituencies. Students find Monica to be very accessible, personable and responsive, and they respect and trust her."

White has served as the Midwest regional representative to the National Association of Graduate-Professional Students, of which the GSAC is a member. She has attended several national conferences and, at one such meeting, made a presentation on "The Importance of Diversity in Higher Academia." She also is a member of the Graduate Dean Search Committee and of the Faculty Senate's Graduate Studies Council.

As an African-American, she has been particularly involved in providing mentoring and support to women of that same heritage. White has assisted the adviser of WMU's Young Black Females Support Network and has worked in an advisory capacity to Alpha Kappa Alpha, a sorority of primarily African-American women. She has made a presentation to AKA on "The Plight of the Black Woman: Past, Present, Future" and has spoken to the AKA Teens on "The Need for Pursuing Academic Excellence in Education."

White also has made presentations to wider audiences. She has spoken on issues surrounding diversity to groups for WMU's Division of Minority Affairs, Office of Student Life and Office of Admissions and Orientation as well as for Pretty Lake Adventure Center and area churches.

White has organized small reading groups composed of young black males and females to explore African history and its significance for understanding the current gender relations problems confronting young African-Americans. She plans to pursue a doctoral degree upon completing her master's degree this year.

The luncheon is open to the public. Persons may make reservations by contacting Linda J. Lumley, Women's Resources and Services, at 7-2990. The cost is $9.50 per person or $6.50 per student.

Scovel earns national award for work in music therapy

Mary A. Scovel, music, has received the 1992 Service Award from the National Association of Music Therapists (NAMT).

Scovel was presented with the award at the 43rd annual NAMT Convention in St. Louis in November. She received a plaque and a citation praising her for "meritorious service" in her long and extensive association with the organization at the state, regional and national levels.

Scovel currently serves as president of the Great Lakes Region of the NAMT. At the national level, she is a member of the nominating committee, executive board and the governmental affairs advisory committee. Since 1978, she has been a member of the national assembly of delegates and, since 1989, she and Brian L. Wilson, director of WMU's music therapy program, have served as co-editors of the NAMT's international clinical journal, Music Therapy Perspectives.

In the past, Scovel has served as president, vice president and secretary of the state organization and has chaired several key state committees as well as edited the regional association's publication, Voice of the Lakes. She also developed a guide to third-party reimbursement for music therapists as a member of a national task force on that subject.

In addition to her service in the NAMT, Scovel was lauded for her work in informing the general public about music therapy as a profession through public presentations and through a book published in 1990.
