President Haenicke announced Oct. 18 that he will recommend to the Board of Trustees at its Oct. 18 meeting that Timothy Light, former president of Middletown College, be appointed adjunct visiting professor for the 1991-92 academic year, effective Nov. 1.

It will mark the second time that Haenicke and Light have worked together. While serving as dean of the College of Humanities at Ohio State University, Haenicke hired Light in 1980 as professor and chairman of the Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures.

Haenicke indicated that Light will advise him on a wide range of curricular and administrative matters. "He is an outstanding scholar in his field and an experienced academic administrator," Haenicke said.

"I am delighted and honored to be given this opportunity to join the Western Michigan University faculty and staff," Light said.

"I look forward to this new assignment with tremendous anticipation. I believe to have a great deal of gratitude. I have many friends and colleagues at WMU, and I look forward to working with them, getting to know them better and many others."

Most recently Light served as president of Middletown College in Vermont. Previously, he was acting president in 1989-90 and provost from 1986 to 1989 at Kalamazoo College. He served as department chairperson and professor at Ohio State University from 1980 to 1986. He also has been an administrator at the University of Iowa, as well as a coordinator of the Chinese language program from 1974 to 1980 and as director of the East Asia Center in 1979-80. He held several academic positions at the New Asia College in China.

Light received his bachelor of science degree, magna cum laude, in English literature and his bachelor of divinity degree in 1965 from Union Theological Seminary, his master of arts degree in teaching English as a foreign language in 1966 from Columbia University's Teachers College and his doctor of philosophy degree in linguistics in 1974 from Cornell University.

Light has received numerous grants and awards, including the University of Arizona Foundation Award for excellence in teaching, two grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, and two grants from the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation to manage national workshops for high school teachers of Chinese.

He has written many scholarly books, monographs, articles and reviews, and he has conducted several international seminars. He has been a co-general editor of the Monographs of the Chinese Language Teachers Association since 1989.

Three to receive awards for superior classroom skills

Award, a $500 scholarship given annually to a student at a U.S. university who is doing outstanding research in pursuing a doctoral degree in physics. Hardie also noted that research is experimental nuclear physics, on which he has written numerous articles for scholarly journals.

In the classroom, Hardie is known for his dedication to explaining the sometimes complicated concepts of physics in student.

The way that he presented the material stimulated my thinking and developed my understanding in ways that it had not been before," said one alumnus in nominating him for the award. "As a class we often found ourselves frustrated and greatly challenged by what he required of us, but when the task was accomplished, often with his help and guidance, a real sense of success was developed.

Hardie has been cited for his attention to curriculum revision and finding better methods of teaching students. "He constantly seeks ways to improve his teaching skills in order to enhance the learning process," said a colleague. "When called upon to teach a new course, he begins months in advance preparing and organizing so that it will be of maximum benefit to the students.

Hardie has been a WMU faculty member since 1960 and plans to retire from the University in December. During his career at WMU, he has served stints as chairperson of the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation and as coordinator of graduate studies. His teaching assignments have ranged from activity classes in the earlier years to more recent courses on such subjects as "Cultural Bases of Sport."

Loaned executive lends a hand to local United Way

Vincent Green says he became a lawyer to help people solve their problems. Now he's putting those skills to work helping the people who've been helped by the Greater Kalamazoo United Way.

Green, who is associate to the general counsel and the vice president for legislative affairs at WMU, is one of 15 employees at WMU who have been loaned to the United Way for the duration of the fiscal year. The university's charge of helping the United Way reach its community-wide goal of $5,660,000 in this fall's fundraising effort.

"The loaned executives attended training sessions and then hit the road to work with local organizations on their campaigns through Nov. 7, the date scheduled for the "United Way celebration," Green says. "The purpose of the training was to acquaint the executives with the agencies and their services in rapid fire."

"Did you know that more than 90 percent of every dollar given to the United Way in Kalamazoo County goes directly to the services?"

Green says he works as hard as a loaned executive as he does in his job at WMU. Recently, he met with some 600 employees at the Meijer store on Gull Road in 25 meetings in three days. He says it's not unusual for a loaned executive to be giving a presentation at any time of the day or night from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. Some have even had meetings conducted at 4 a.m. on the loading dock.

"This is a very demanding work for the people who are employed at United Way year-round," he says. "I like that the loaned executive is not to beat the heat, but to get out and breathe a fresh air and help ease the load."

Green says he's enjoying his experience as a loaned executive. He says the opportunity to help people and the type of work really appeals to him.

"He says he'll come back to this job at WMU in November a better person. "Before, I was a lawyer who helped people. After, I thought they were dependent on us. Now I know that the United Way is using funds to help these people remain independent."

Visually impaired athletic teams to compete in goal ball tournament here Saturday, Oct. 19

Imagine hearing an object approaching while you are participating in a sporting event, but you know exactly when the object will be near or far. This scenario is common for visually impaired athletes who can do just that while playing a rigorous game called "goal ball." The annual Kalamazoo Invitational Goal Ball Tournament will begin at 7-45 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 19, in the Gary Center gymnasium. It is sponsored by the Department of Blind Rehabilitation.

The tournament, which is sanctioned by the U.S. Association for Blind Athletes, will feature men's and women's teams from Michigan, California, Florida, Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Texas. The teams will compete in separate divisions for men and women.

The teams that finished first, second and third in last year's national tournament will continue their rivalries. The WMU men's and women's teams last year finished second and third, respectively, in the tournament. The game is similar to hockey or soccer, is goal-oriented, fast-paced and rigorous. The playing area has dimensions similar to a volleyball court. The 3.5-pound ball contains bells, so players can hear it.

Recycling
In September, WMU recycled 56.8 tons of office paper, corrugated cardboard and newspapers. This was a 34 percent increase, amounting to 13.8 percent of the total waste stream.

In 1996 trees from being harvested, 527 barrels of oil, 397,000 gallons of process water and 187 cubic yards of landfill space were saved.

Remember, polystyrene foam (Styrofoam) is now recyclable. Please call the recycling office at 7-8165 if you have foam for recycling or any questions about the program. Thank you for your cooperation.

Zest for Life
Have you been looking for a fitness program that includes a variety of exercise stations into one challenging noon-time workout? Then the Zest for Life "Curv-eil" program may be for you. You've been looking for your maximum exercise experience from 12:05 to 12:50 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays in the space adjacent to the Zest for Life Fitness Room. This program, which is offered to men as well as women for a complete go-at-your-own-pace workout, has been involved, just specific exercises assigned to stations to be performed for a predetermined time period. Enjoy the group support and environment.

Media Services
Congratulations to Pamela S. Rups, media services, third place in her third award in the higher education classroom category in the Alda and T.H.E. Journal Effective Communi- cations Program. The film "World of Ideas With Bill Moyers, Season I," was reviewed in the "National Video Review Video Series" and 16 new titles from "Newsway," individual program titles of the film "The New Yearbook," "What Are Is Which You Choose?" (Raymond Magsamen), "The New Yearbook 1990," "Typsetting and Layout Terminology," was reviewed in the "National Video Review Video Series" on the extent to which it achieved the stated communication objectives, on attractiveness and information and utility. The award was announced in the October issue of the T.H.E. Journal. Rups has conducted seminars on fitness programs, and is currently involved with the Department of Human Resources.

Thanks to a grant this spring from the Kalamazoo Community Foundation (KCF), the University's films/video tape library now has several new videotape series available to individuals and groups. Films included in these additions are: "Inside Gorbatchev's USSR," "BIC's Shakespeare Collection," "Women's Studies Video Series," "World of Ideas With Bill Moyers, Season I," "Newsway: National Video Review Video Series." These are just a few of the titles now available for viewing at the library.

On Campus
SUPPORTING SCIENCE EDUCATION — Kay A. Shearer says her job as an administrative assistant in the Center for Science Education requires her to be a "jack-of-all-trades." She handles a variety of tasks to keep the center running effectively.

The most important function of my job is to watch the grant we use to make sure we're spending it the way it was intended," she says. She edits reports and proposals in connection with various projects. She also acts as a liaison between the center and the University as well as outside the University, helping the center to establish the center and work with students and teachers with and without special needs.

Shearer first was a WMU student in 1964-65, when she was a student here. She was an administrative secretary in the Department of Physics from 1965 to 1973, and then took a break from the University to raise a family. She came back to WMU in 1986, working in general studies and academic services before joining the Center for Science Education staff two years ago.

Looking for information? The University libraries are beginning a series of WESTNET workshops featuring FINDER, WMU's online catalog, and DIALOG database, including ERIC (education/social sciences), ABI/INFORM (business) and PSYCINFO (psychological abstracts).

The first workshop in the series will be held Tuesday, Oct. 22, from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 21, at 9:35 a.m. on WKMI-AM (1360). Whether you are a new speaker or a veteran, the various workshops include materials, lunch and snacks for $30. There is no charge for the class, which includes an overview of the QUAD, database, and "Job Opportunity Program and vacancies available to external applicants."

Jobs
The following list of vacancies includes new positions posted through the Job Opportunity Program by employment services. Interested applicants are encouraged to interview directly.

Library
Throughout the month of October, the Michigan Regional chapter of the Guild of Book Workers is sponsoring an exhibit of fine books and hand bindings in the third floor lobby of Waldo Library. The exhibit has been on display in Ohio and Indiana and, following this exhibit in Michigan, will travel to Wabash College, Ind., for an exhibition in November.

The Guild of Book Workers was founded in 1957 to "establish and maintain a feeling of kinship and mutual interest among workers in the several hand book crafts." The Midwest chapter, established in 1977, serves people working or interested in the book arts in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. The guild represents all of the hand book crafts, with membership encompassing binders, printers, calligraphers, paper makers and other book artists/craftspersons as well as collectors, librarians and others interested in these fields.

Throughout in activities, the Guild of Book Workers seeks to broaden understanding of the hand book arts, to stimulate the commit- ments of the book craft traditions, and to widen communica- tion among artists/craftspersons working in the book arts field.

To obtain an illustrated catalog, for more information on the exhibit and to register for the tour, call Pamela S. Rups, media services, at 7-8165.

Retired faculty member co-edits second edition of book on school libraries with WMU graduate

The second edition of a 1972 book by a retired faculty member has been published with help from a WMU alumnus and a host of other world scholars.

School Libraries: International Devel- opments," originally written by Jean E. Loutre, emeritus in librarianship, many new countries are added in the updated version, which she edited with Miroku Nagakura, professor and director of the School of Library Laboratory, 204 Bernhard Center. She is an internationally recognized expert in library science from WMU in 1958.

School library experts from 23 countries contributed articles to this book on such topics as administration and management techniques, certification requirements, general education in the country, history of school library development, professional support, and standards and curricula. The 403-page illustrated text was published by Scarecrow Press, Inc., of Metuchen, N.J.

Among the new countries included in the book are Finland, Germany, Hong Kong, Iceland, India, Israel, Jordan, Malaysia, the People's Republic of China, South Africa and Thailand.

Ramirez re-elected to board

Miguel A. Ramirez, minority affairs, has been re-elected to the board of directors of the Michigan Educational Opportunity Fund Inc.
The Lansing-based non-profit group elected Ramirez to a term that lasts until 1994. His duties will include attending the four board meetings a year, studying various programs the group offers and attending the annual meetingle meeting in September.

The Michigan Educational Opportunity Fund Inc. is a non-profit organization devoted to the educational advancement of Hispanics and other disadvantaged groups. Over the last five years, the board has awarded more than $30,000 in scholarships, provided programs the teachers and students have wanted and helped to improve writing skills among K-12 students, worked to develop the artistic and other disadvantaged groups.
