The Faculty Senate Jan. 10 approved a new Student Code to replace the existing Code of Student Rights and Responsibilities. The new code was revised by the Senate's Academic and Student Affairs Committee and was presented to the Senate for its approval.

In his remarks to the Senate, Haenicke said, "The new code is a result of a year’s work by the Senate and the administration to improve our rules for student conduct, to make them more understandable, to address current issues and to give it a student development focus," said Theresa A. Powell, acting vice president for student services.

The Senate recommended to the Board of Trustees to give the code complete action on the code.

The code emphasizes a sense of community in which every member, including La. Morado, assists to Powell. "It emphasizes that the University is a community and that the University is a part of the larger community.

The new code eliminates legalistic language and has a table of contents, which the existing code does not. The code includes a statement of philosophy and articles on student rights, University regulations and the Budget. The Board meeting will begin at 11 a.m. in the Board Room of the Bernhard Center. Agenda items include the grant of enereiur status for the retiring trustees and the election of officers for the difficult moment for everybody who receives money from the state."

"I hope that the governor will have a favorable look at education. We have been spared an enormous blow in the first round, as well as of all you know," he said. "I am very pleased with the governor’s appointment of Richard Haworth to our governing board," said President Haenicke.

"Mr. Haworth already has an extensive record of demonstrated service to our institution as an alumnus, volunteer and benefactor."

Phone sessions set for current WMU students to offer campus life tips to prospective freshmen

Remember the anticipation and questions you faced as a high school senior, deciding which college to attend? WMU is seeking to put some of those students who have been admitted to the university. On Jan. 28-29, for example, seniors who have been admitted to WMU, "will speak of their experiences on the university's campus," Edwards says.

There now are a total of 12 WMU employees who hold the Certified Professional Secretary designation. The five who previously passed the examination are: Steven Armstrong, Academic Skills Center; Helen M. Horn, engineering technology; Mary E. Ramlow and Sally A. Veeder, both Evaluation Center; and Deborah K. Wilhee, Talent Center.

Seats available for trip to 'Starlight Express'

The Clerical/Technical/Organization is planning a bus trip to see Andrew Lloyd Webber's musical, "Starlight Express," on Saturday, March 30, at DeVos Hall in Grand Rapids.

The president comments

Last week's National Collegiate Athletic Association convention in Nashville was very different in one important way. Because of the way it was dominated by the President's address, it was told that it attracted a record enrollment of participants.

College presidents have taken an increased interest in athletics, and their concerns are:
- What is the legal and ethical framework for participation?
- Will the cost of athletics escalate to a degree that we can't stop it anymore?
- Are the graduation rates of our athletes?
- Are athletic departments become too distant from the mainstream of the university?

I went to the convention very hopeful because there had been a flurry of written communications between the various presidential offices in the country. The 40-member Presidential Commission that prepared the convention resolutions had lobbied and informed the presidents of all major institutions very extensively as to the great urgency to devote particular attention to this convention, to come and to support their agenda.

COMP dates announced

Faculty members are asked to remind their students to sign up for the administration of the College Outcomes Measurement System, which will test the seniors to sign up for the winter of 1991 and the spring of 1992.

A good number of the students are not sure what these proposals tend to do. The membership committee of the Admission Committee has been involved in answering many of these questions.

The test also will be administered at the WMU Muskegon Regional Center from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 21; 2 to 4:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 22; and 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 23. Those approved for sabbaticals are:

- Darlene J. Blacker, Sindecuse Health Services.
- Andrew S. Targowski, business information systems.
- Jay S. Treiman, mathematics and statistics.
- Allen M. Falk, religion.
- David Hargreave, natural sciences.
- Leander C. Jones, black Americana studies.
- Richard L. Goess, humanities and art.
- Ronald A. Gamble, business administration systems.
- John R. Beech, history.
- Dale M. Brethower, philosophy.
- Beatrice H. Rogers, speech pathology and audiology.
- John De Peaux, humanities and art.
- Nancy A. Beech, history.
- Shirley Bach, philosophy.

The membership committee of the Admission Committee has been involved in answering many of these questions. The membership committee includes a WMU employee since 1970, Goes as manager of operational services. A third title change, which did not require Board approval, also took effect that day. Timothy K. Gill, assistant vice president for business services.

The faculty grants titled retirement emeritus status was Reginald A. Gammon, humanities.

New ideas -- Coming up with creative approaches to problem solving is a goal of Thanhhauser both in his role as a staff member and as a graduate student. Since 1984, he has been the laboratory supervisor in the Department of Mechanical Engineering. He's responsible for maintaining and demonstrating equipment and for finding out what new equipment might be available. He says he works primarily with students who are interested in applying what they have learned on their senior projects, giving them the opportunity to develop their skills and solve problems. "I try to stick with a different approach rather than the cut and dry method because it's worth trying just because it hasn't been done before." Thanhhauser applies this same principle to his research as a graduate student. He earned his bachelor's degree at Southeast Missouri State and is pursuing his master's degree in mechanical engineering on a part-time basis. He's found a rate and easier method of determining the wavelengths of certain infrared beams than has been used in textbooks for the last 50 years. He has written papers on this topic presented at professional conferences and published in refereed journals. In February of this year, April, he was named a University Graduate Research and Creative Scholar for his contributions.

Woman of the Year nominees needed

The WMU Commission on the Status of Women is seeking nominations for its Woman of the Year Award. The award is intended to recognize outstanding women employees and students at the University and to increase awareness of the variety of their achievements.

Nomination letters are due Tuesday, Jan. 18, in 205 Bernhard Center. Kent Baldner, philosophy, will address the nomination process.

Nominees should address the following questions:
- What is the nominee's leadership on behalf of women, stature as a role model for women and service to women?
- Any individual or group at the University may nominate a woman for this award. Those nominated in previous years must be renominated to be considered. All those nominated this year will be honored at a luncheon Wednesday, March 20.

All current women employees and students at WMU are eligible for the award. Those nominated this year will be notified. Either sustained effort over time or a single, major activity or accomplishment qualifies a woman to receive the award. A woman may win the award only once. More information will be distributed on campus.

Information regarding graduate school admission and answer questions, Daniel said. Information will be provided on such matters as the Graduate Record Examination and other tests required for admission to graduate programs.

Event to provide graduate student information

The third annual Graduate Diversity Information Day will take place from noon to 2 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 23, in 209 Bernhard Center.

The event, which begins with a free lunch from a sandwich bar, includes information on admission, graduate programs and financial assistance, said Griselda Daniel, Graduate College.

"The purpose of our event is to provide potential graduate students with pertinent information regarding graduate school and to provide current master's level students with information for doctoral candidacy," Daniel said.

Staff members from the Graduate College will be available to provide information and answer questions on campus. Information will be provided on such matters as the Graduate Record Examination and other tests required for admission to graduate programs.

Daniel said the Graduate Diversity Information Day is an attempt to reach minority students with the potential for graduate study early in their careers at WMU. The event is open to all upper-division students at WMU in addition to graduate students seeking more information.

"Since the implementation of the Graduate Diversity Program at WMU, we have made significant strides toward making our student population a truly diverse one," Daniel said. One program, which begins this semester, will identify minority undergraduate students with potential for graduate study and offer them financial support for study through the doctoral degree.

More information is available from Daniel at 7-3550. Reservations for the luncheon are preferred but not required.

Japan teaching program seeks applicants

Applications are now available for the Japan Study and Teaching Program. The program seeks to promote mutual understanding between Japan and U.S. and to foster international perspectives in our students. Information will be distributed from August 1991 to July 1992 in Japan, teaching English or advising local government on international activities. Applicants must be of American nationality, be under age 35 and hold at least a bachelor's degree.

For more information, persons may contact Michinobu Sigir, international affairs, at 7-3951.
