JUST PLANE GOOD LUCK -- A group of well-wishers from the faculty and staff wanted President Haenicke to know they were thinking about him and his impending surgery. So last Saturday, they hired a plane with a "good luck" message and had it fly over Waldo Stadium, where he was watching the Broncos defeat Temple University. Haenicke entered Bronson Methodist Hospital on Monday and had elective heart bypass surgery on Tuesday. As of Wednesday morning, hospital officials reported that the surgery had gone well. Haenicke received a "standard double bypass" and his vital signs were stable. The officials said he was doing as well as could be expected at that point and that doctors would be watching him closely over the next few days. Haenicke’s family has said he was doing as well as could be expected at that point and that doctors would be watching him closely over the next few days. Haenicke’s family has

Faculty, staff invited to join in community celebration

WMU students, faculty and staff will be the prime attraction of honor on Wednesday, Sept. 13, as part of a community celebration. "Kickoff Kalamazoo/Welcome Back, WMU Day," on Kalamazoo’s historic, 30-year-old downtown mall.

Grape stomping, bed races and a Bronco football pep rally are among the activities being planned as part of the joint event to also mark the kickoff of the 1989 Greater Kalamazoo United Way campaign. Other activities will include: entertainment by entertainments by area high school bands, familiarization tours of the downtown high lights, special Metro bus service to and from campus, Breakfast Club service and a street dance.

Free campus guides available

Do you have some conference participants coming to town who need to know their way around campus? Do you get numerous requests for directions to campus buildings?

Now you can have this information right at your fingertips. The Office of University Publications is offering to campus departments copies of its "Campus Guide" free of charge.

The guide contains a colorful map of the WMU campus, a variety of campus maps are also available, information on the history of the University, landmarks, parking, tours and athletic and cultural facilities. It also lists key University offices and their telephone numbers.

Departments may order as many copies of the guides as they need. To order, send a note to University publications and include the quantity you want and where they should be delivered.

APA fall meeting is Sept. 20

The fall business and social meeting of the Administrative Professional Association is scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 20, at the Willow Lake Clubhouse at Parkview Hills. All professional/administrative employees of the University are invited to attend.

The event will begin with a social hour at 5:15 p.m., followed by a business meeting at 6 p.m. At 7 p.m., there will be a Greek dinner catered by Theo and Stacey’s.

The cost for the dinner is $8. Reservations are due Friday, Sept. 15, to Jolene V. Grob, international student services.

Figures indicate record enrollment

More students -- 26,133 of them -- are attending WMU this fall than at any time in its history, according to preliminary enrollment figures released Sept. 5.

"We are very pleased, and we’re working hard to accommodate the students," said Provost George M. Dennison of the 22,733 attending classes on campus and an estimated 3,400 students attending off-campus classes.

Both are institutional records. The total increase over last fall’s record enrollment of 24,861 is 1,272 students or 5.1 percent. This is the fifth consecutive fall that enrollment has increased at WMU.

This is a very positive reflection on the image and reputation of Western Michigan University for academic programs and student support services of high quality," Dennison said. "Everyone in the University community -- including the students -- deserves credit for this outstanding job.

On-campus enrollment is up 1,141 students, or 5.1 percent, from last year’s total of 21,592 students, Dennison said.

The fall growth resulted largely from the retention of larger freshman classes and an increase in students transferring from two-year colleges and other institutions over the past three years," Dennison said. "The number of minority students has increased as well."

There are 3,371 new freshmen this fall, an increase of 43 students or 1.3 percent from 1,994 students last fall to 2,133 students this fall. Total minority enrollment has increased 12.3 percent, from 1,411 students last fall to 1,584 students this fall.

"The most dramatic increase in minority enrollment is at the freshman level," Dennison said. "We have a record 259 minority freshmen this fall, compared with 183 last fall, for an increase of 41.5 percent. This is a tribute to increased recruitment efforts of the Office of Admissions and Orientation and the successful retention efforts instituted by the recently reorganized Division of Minority Affairs.

President Haenicke has expressed his appreciation to faculty and staff members "who must shoulder the burden of these greater numbers."

"We're very pleased our faculty and staff members, and I want each of them to know that their special efforts are very much appreciated," he said.

Because of the strain on resources, Haenicke said, he has appointed a task force to examine the possibility of capping enrollment in the future. He hopes that a "serious" discussion in July that enrollment capping would be "seriously considered in the face of insufficient state appropriations."

Poet’s son, Irish political leader to speak

Michael Yeats, the only son of the world famous Irish poet William Butler Yeats, will present a free public lecture on the "Common Market and 1992" at 7:30 p.m. in Bronson Park.

His visit to campus is being sponsored by WMU’s Institute of Government and Public Affairs, the Student Senate, the Office of Admissions and Orientation, the WMU Alumni Association and Downtown Kalamazoo Inc. All area residents, students, faculty and staff are encouraged to attend the lecture.

"We are actively working to recreate an energetic, balanced downtown, and we have identified WMU as a pivotal element in the fulfillment of our goals," said Donavan J. Kindle, spokesperson for an ad hoc group of concerned citizens who sometimes uses the title of TNC (The New City).

The recent economic impact study attests that Western plays a major role in the economic success or failure of our community," one consultant said. "Our downtown campus is in close proximity to the downtown. We want to express a recognition of WMU’s importance to our community."

Activities will begin at 12:30 p.m., with the grape stomp at the fountain near the pedestrian bridge on the campus. Metro Transit will provide free bus service every 30 minutes from noon Wednesday to 1:30 a.m. Thursday.

There will be five stops: Spindler Hall, Davis Hall, Sangren Hall, Goldsworth Valley IV Campus Apartments and across from the Kalamazoo Center.

Tours of downtown attractions and stores will be provided throughout the afternoon.

There will be an information table at the downtown bus stop. Passports will be handed out on the bus. The first 40 students, faculty and staff who get their passports stamped at 10 of the 42 cooperating stores and agencies will receive a free T-shirt designed especially for the Sept. 13 community celebration.

Bed races are scheduled for 4:30 to 6 p.m. on South Street between Henrietta and Rose streets. Between 6 and 7:30 p.m., air bands will compete on the South Downtown Mall in front of Fidelity Federal Savings and Loan. Area high school bands will begin performing at 7 p.m. in Bronson Park.

A pep band contingent of the Bronco Marching Band, directed by Patrick Dennigan, will participate in a Bronco football pep rally beginning at 7:30 p.m. Parents should be at 10-Ail Molde and members of his Bronco football team and coaching staff.

The United Way kickoff program will start at 7 p.m. in Bronson Park, with high school bands, speakers and family activities. A street dance featuring live music by the Mick Furlo Band will begin at 9 p.m. in Bronson Park sponsored by Bourbon Street.

A special added attraction for faculty and staff is being offered by the Kalamazoo Center. A dance, featuring the Woody Herman Orchestra, is set for 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 per person to cover the cost of the dance and complimentary hors d'oeuvres.

The center also is offering a special package for $115 that includes dinner for two, the dance and overnight accommodations. It will be a 10 percent senior citizen discount for the Kalamazoo Center dance and overnight package.

Downtown restaurants are being asked to stay open to provide a breakfast menu between 11 p.m. and 2 a.m.

World War II veterans are expected to return to duty Sept. 9

It was called the Good Ship Western Michigan. Dormitories and dining halls became "quarters" and "mess halls." If a student was ill, he reported to "sick bay." WMU was one of 131 campuses nationwide that turned its facilities over to the military during World War II for V-12 and V-5 officer training programs. Many of those men will be returning to the campus Saturday, Sept. 9, for a wartime reunion. More than 150 graduates of WMU's V-12 and V-5 programs, alumni from the years 1943-48 and friends of the University will gather on campus to recall a time when the draft was a part of everyday life and when the trappings and terms of a naval unit to prepare a select group of young men for college courses and military training may be replaced by "farewell cruises" for young sailors when they ride the trolley to graduation. The Sept. 9 reunion is the second wartime reunion sponsored by the Alumni Association and the Western Class of 1945. It will be held at the Bernhard Center on the campus.

The event will precede a four-day national Navy V-12 colloquium scheduled for Sept. 28-Oct. 1 in Washington, D.C. That event is expected to attract President George Bush and such V-12 veterans as U.S. Sens. Howard H. Baker and Daniel P. Moynihan, comedian Johnny Carson and metropolitan columnist Tom Wicker.

New and V-5 programs were initiated on campuses across the country to satisfy the need for educated, physically fit, trained and qualified officers and aviators to be commissioned for duty during the war. The V-12 program provided a supply of college-trained officer candidates for various specialties in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. The V-5 Aviation Cadet Program provided trained naval flyers.

Programs were initiated at a time when the draft age was being reduced from 18 to 17 because of the influx of physically fit men and the draft age was being reduced to 16 when the the draft age was being reduced to 16. By the end of the war, the programs had produced one-sixth of the trained naval flyers.

By the end of the war, the programs had produced one-sixth of the trained naval flyers.

The majority of program participants were recruited from men already in college who had either passed a nationwide qualifying exam. All had to meet strict physical and mental requirements. At Western, more than 800 men participated in the two programs from 1943-1945, completely filling all campus housing. Many of those returned to the University to complete their college studies after the war.

According to Tracy Connely, McKeen Alumni Center, participants in the V-12 and V-5 programs at Western took part in the full range of activities available to the student body. Program participants produced their own student yearbook called a "log" and the marching band took on a military appearance.

WMU's athletic teams, he says, enjoyed a string of remarkable successes because of the influx of physically fit recruits.

The Sept. 9 reunion is the second wartime reunion sponsored by the 1989-91 WMU undergraduate catalogs arrive

They're here. . . .

Many of the requirements in the catalogs are in the front section on general information. "The general information section has been organized to better help students through the process of admission, financial aid, academic policies and procedures and degree programs," Smith said. The redesign has thus been developed by an ad hoc committee chaired by Susan B. Hannah, assistant vice president for academic affairs.

A new listing called a "Course Reference" has been added. This section alphabetically lists all that off-campus classes, along with the page numbers on which they're found.

A "Glossary of Terms" also is now included in front part of the catalog. In the past, the listing of physical facilities and campus map have been moved from the back of the catalog to the front.

"Other changes," according to Smith, are notes that are pages printed on an 81/2 by 11-inch form rather than a tabloid paper. The campus economy saved the University about $40,000, accord to Smith.

A total of 72,000 catalogs were printed this year, compared with 47,827 of the 1987-89 version.

Acquaintance rape prevention and education to be focus of seminar and public forum

Providing personnel with the resources they need to implement comprehensive acquaintance rape prevention and education programs is the goal of a new project involving Kalamazoo and the higher education institutions.

The Acquaintance Rape Prevention/ Education Training Project is being funded by the Title IX Commission for Higher Education. Project participants include: Davenport College, Kalamazoo College, Kalamazoo Valley Community College, Nazareth College and WMU.

Since February, key personnel from each institution have attended a half-day 60-75 minute planning sessions to complete the first phase of the project. A seminar on "Acquaintance Rape: Hidden Victims, Visible Effects" to launch the second phase is scheduled for 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the same room for the general community.

Other speakers will include Julie Steiner, coordinator for the University of Michigan's Sexual Assault Prevention and Education Program, and Plummer, director of Prevention Training Associates in Kalamazoo. Since the prevention program should deal with sexual violence in terms of counseling victims and providing educational programming.

At the end of the seminar, participants from WMU, Kalamazoo College, Nazareth College and WMU will meet with members of their campus community to develop strategies for the implementation of acquaintance rape prevention and education programs in their own environment.

The ultimate goal -- phase three of the project -- will be to have task forces from each campus identify the goals, structure and implementation of rape education and prevention programs at their respective institutions. These groups will be charged with developing education models, curriculum materials and programming for the campus.

The public forum will focus on such questions as how to determine when a sexual encounter is rape, how to get help and what a community can do. Panelists will be: William J. Burkhart; Eldy Ryder of the Kalamazoo YWCA Sexual Assault Project and Christopher Walrath, prosecuting attorney for Kalamazoo County and director of the YWCA Sexual Assault Program.

"Brown and Gold Day," the largest annual on-campus recruitment program sponsored by the Office of Admissions, will be held for Saturday, Sept. 9. About 2,500 high school and community college students and members of their families are expected to participate this year. Other activities will include an academic open house, campus tours, workshops and the WMU community basketball game.

The public forum will be in Read Fieldhouse, which will serve as headquarters for the day.
Economists explore labor relations in new book

The views of six prominent labor economists are gathered in a book published in a new book by the Upjohn Institute for Employment Research in Kalamazoo.

"Organized Labor at the Crossroads" features essays by John E. Marston of WMU Department of Economics' 24th annual lecture-seminar series in 1987-88. "We're seeing an increasing problem of declining union membership in this state and the nation. The decline to apparent union strength among the collection was edited by Wilson and authors, who directed the series that year.

The introductory chapter by Huang that provides a general flavor and comments on the issues addressed in the essays.

The chapter titles and their authors are:

"Responding to a Changing World" by Sharon P. Smith of Kochan of the Massachusetts Institute of Industrial Relations" by Thomas A.

"Bargaining Realities: Responding to a Changing World" by Sharon P. Smith of Kochan of the Massachusetts Institute of Industrial Relations" by Thomas A.

"Economists explore labor relations in new book

The book begins with an introductory essay by Thomas A. Kochan, who explores the challenges facing labor relations professionals today. Kochan highlights the importance of understanding the changing dynamics of the workplace and the evolving role of labor unions in a global economy.

The book contains six papers presented during the series, each addressing a specific aspect of labor relations. These papers cover a range of topics, including the impact of globalization on labor unions, the role of technology in labor-management relations, and the importance of employee training and development.

The essays are written by leading scholars in the field of labor relations, including Thomas A. Kochan, Sharon P. Smith, and others.

More than just a computer store

The Bernhard Mall of the Bernhard Center for Academic Computing is a support office rather than a store. "We're a one-stop shop," says Director Jerry Bickle, "We provide computer support and technical assistance to all members of the WMU community." The office offers a wide range of services, including computer repair, software installation, and assistance in securing positions.

The office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Staff members are available to assist students, faculty, and staff with computer-related issues. They can come in here and see what services are available, Bickle says, adding that the office is a resource for students and faculty alike.

"WMU is an EEO/AA employer," Bickle notes. "We're committed to diversity and inclusion in all aspects of our operations." The office is staffed by a team of professionals, including IT technicians and customer service representatives.

TheBernhard Mall of the Bernhard Center for Academic Computing is located in the basement of the Bernhard Center. It is open to all members of the WMU community and is equipped with a variety of computer hardware and software.

The Bernhard Mall of the Bernhard Center is dedicated to providing high-quality computer support and technical assistance to all members of the WMU community. They are committed to helping students, faculty, and staff succeed in their work and studies by providing the tools and resources they need to be successful.

In addition to computer repair and software installation, the Bernhard Mall of the Bernhard Center offers a variety of other services, including computer training, technology workshops, and assistance in finding employment.

The Bernhard Mall of the Bernhard Center is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. They are always happy to help and can be reached by phone or email at 7-3620 or bcn-mall@wmu.edu. They look forward to serving you!
Cultivating cranes
With the amount of construction taking place on campus this fall, one may sometimes get the feeling that the bushes are sprouting cranes. This equipment, captured by University photographer Neil Rankin, is near the site for the new computer center and the addition to Waldo Library. Those projects, as well as the new building to house the Hawworth College of Business, are expected to be finished in fall 1990.

Two experts initiate Visiting Scholars Program

Experts on dance movement and on cooperative learning will be the first speakers in the 1989-90 Visiting Scholars Program.

Judy Gantz, a dance kinesiologist and faculty member at the University of California at Los Angeles, will visit campus Thursday and Friday, Sept. 7-8.

David W. Johnson, professor of educational psychology at the University of Minnesota, will be here Tuesday and Thursday, Sept. 7, in the Dalton Center.

Gantz regularly conducts certification programs at the Laban/Bartenieff Institute of Movement Studies in New York City. She also works privately as a kinetic therapist. She was choreographer and movement consultant on the Angela Lansbury health and movement video released last fall.

Johnson has conducted hundreds of workshops for teachers interested in implementing the practice of organizing students into groups that cooperate, learn various concepts and skills. He will provide insights into the research in this area during his lecture.

In addition to his faculty status, Johnson is co-director of the Cooperative Learning Center at the University of Minnesota and a practicing psychotherapist. He is the author of 17 books and more than 250 research articles for leading psychological journals.

Gantz’s visit to campus is being coordinated by the Department of Dance, while the Department of Education and Professional Development is organizing Johnson’s visit.

The Visiting Scholars Program was established in 1960, and has provided nearly 400 visits by scholars representing some 65 academic disciplines. The Visiting Scholars Committee is chaired by Judith Stone, history.
