He'd Make a Lovely Corpse

Su Stitz

Follow this and additional works at: http://scholarworks.wmich.edu/calliope
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://scholarworks.wmich.edu/calliope/vol1988/iss1/2

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the English at ScholarWorks at WMU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Calliope by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at WMU. For more information, please contact maira.bundza@wmich.edu.
HE'D MAKE A LOVELY CORPSE

Such a gentleman in his starched blue suit--no wrinkles, no lint. No movement.
Make-up hides him, or perhaps enhances him, as an actor on stage.
"He looks so natural. He looks so natural..."
He is a natural dead person.
Mouth open in life's last breath, he invites a kiss on his purple lips, devoid of blood, yet swollen like bloated worms.
His cologne is generic Death, bushy flowers and embalming fluid.
Veins sucked of blood hide in his stiffened hands, folded properly.
His hair, like a cheap toupee, is shellacked thickly in place.
There's no need--he won't turn in his sleep.
His fingernails are squared and clean clean clean.
Short.
Once underground the darkness will make them grow.
His skin will shrink.

Oh yes, I think as I look at him. He's a natural.

Su Stitz