

EAST HALL MAY BECOME HISTORIC SITE

East Hall, the original building on the University's campus, has been recommended by the Michigan State Historic Preservation Review Board for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places. The Board's recommendation that East Hall be designated as an historic place at the state level of significance is being forwarded to the Department of Interior for approval.

"East Hall was recommended for recognition at the state, rather than local level, because it is the key historical building on Western's campus," said John Kern, historic preservation coordinator, Michigan History Division of the Department of State.

The original East Hall was authorized by the Michigan Legislature in 1903, was built in 1904, and occupied in 1905. In 1907, a gymnasium, pool and additional classrooms were constructed, and facilities for the Campus Training School were built in 1909. A connecting unit was added in 1947.

"I am very pleased by this action, although it is just the first step toward determining whether we can get a federal grant to help us rehabilitate East Hall or construct a new building," said WMU Trustee Fred Adams.

ALAN PATON TO VISIT CAMPUS

Alan Paton, author of the best-selling book, "Cry, the Beloved Country," former president of the Liberal Party in South Africa, and spokesman for racial justice, will make his first major statement in the U.S.A. on the present South African situation at 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 24, in Miller Auditorium.

In the free, public address entitled "A Total View of South Africa, 1977," he will speak from his experience, not only on the background and present circumstances of apartheid, but look, as he says, "...fearlessly at what possibilities the future may realistically be thought to hold."

Other books written by the leader of South Africa's non-racial Liberal Party include "Apartheid and the Archbishop," a biography of the Anglican Archbishop of Cape Town; a book of meditations, "Instrument of Thy Peace"; and a collection of prose and verse published last year, "Knocking on the Door." A display of Paton's books is currently being shown on the first floor of WMU's Waldo Library.

Arrangements for the author to visit the University were made by his long time friend, Dr. Edward Callan, WMU professor of English. He has known Paton since 1948 and has written and edited two important books about him--"Alan Paton" and "The Long View." The latter is called "a deeply personal statement of a man who has devoted his energy and talents to the achievements of a non-racial society."

Paton's tie to Western Michigan University is also by way of the theatre. His book, "Cry, the Beloved Country" was adapted for the stage by Dr. Zack York, chairman of the WMU department of theatre. It was the first production given at Laura V. Shaw Theatre when it opened in 1968.

In addition to his major lecture on Tuesday evening, Paton will speak and read from his works from 3-5 p.m. Monday, May 23, at an invitation only Honors College symposium, and a similar event for the WMU English department at noon that Tuesday.
