Approve New Advising Plan

The first comprehensive University-wide plan for academic advising of Western students was approved Friday by the WMU Board of Trustees.

The Trustees' approval of the plan, submitted by Dr. Philip Den- endoff, associate vice president for academic affairs, authorizes the University to develop a system of academic advising composed of many present departmental and college advising programs and modifications of other existing programs.

The new advising system results from a year-long study by a representative University committee appointed to recommend a systematic approach to academic advising, which Denendoff told the Board "has for many years been uneven and in some areas simply inadequate."

Prior to Board approval, the committee's report was reviewed and approved by Western's Educational Policies Council and the Faculty Senate.

According to the committee's suggested timetable, total implementation will be achieved by September 1, 1975, including development of a coordinator of academic advising and articulation, responsible to the vice president for academic affairs; designation of college level personnel specifically responsible for academic advising; establishment of college and departmental level programs.

Highlights of the new system are: advising is not mandatory, but at least one advisor who is willing and able to discuss the overall program pattern will be available to every student; each student will be assigned an advisor; each college will determine how students will be advised, goals and procedures by the Educational Policies Council; and the coordinator of academic advising and articulation have responsibility for the overall system.

Symphony To Open

The University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Herbert Butler, will present its first concert of the year at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 6, in Western's Miller Auditorium.

The free concert will also inaugurate the 1974-75 LeviLevel series in which patrons wearing casual clothing may choose to sit in the Auditorium's Grand Tier, the designated LeviLevel.

Guest conductor Chou Wen-chung, who will be a participant in Western's Academic Forum this week, will direct his own composition on the program. The orchestra also will perform works by Mozart and Hindemith.

The Sunday afternoon concert series is planned as a family series for family entertainment.

Appointments of two new department chairmen, plus several changes of title, are among numerous personnel actions approved Friday by Western's Board of Trustees.

Dr. Lloyd J. Schultz, professor of geology, and Isabelle Smith, assistant professor of home economics, were appointed chairmen of their respective departments.

A change in title for Dr. Myron L. Coulter from interim president to vice president for administration, effective Sept. 1, and for Dr. Morvin A. Wirtz from associate dean of education to professor of special education, effective Aug. 31, also were approved. Coulter served as Western's chief administrative officer from March 1 through Aug. 31. Previously, Coulter had served as assistant vice president for institutional services; his new title is intended to more reflect his responsibilities in small areas of responsibility, said WMU President John T. Bernhard.

These and all other actions, including approval of 15 additions to the counseling faculty, were among 72 personnel actions approved at the board meeting.

A lump sum allocation from the Bureau of Budget and Management will bring the total to $57.6 million. These requests are to correct hazardous conditions and deficiencies in buildings and to alter spaces for departments in the College of Applied Sciences.

A 1975-76 capital outlay budget request totaling $57.6 million for planning, construction and renovation of physical facilities was approved Friday by Western's Board of Trustees. The request is in addition to what the Trustees approved for 1974-75.

The 1975-76 request actually will be phased in over a five fiscal year period, according to Dr. John L. Coulter, vice president for administration.

A change in title for Dr. Myron A. Wirtz, assistant professor of special education, effective Aug. 23, 1974; and John P. Williams, assistant professor of anthropology, effective Aug. 23, 1974; and John P. Will, assistant professor of anthropology, effective April 27, 1974.

Douglas E. Sullivan, instructor of industrial education; Harold Harns, assistant professor, humanities area, College of Liberal Studies; Robert E. VanLentenborger, assistant professor of accounting; Thomas V. Vassil, assistant professor of education; Wayne Kowalski, vice president for administration; and James P. Zappern, assistant professor of business education and administration, were appointed to the director of the Community School Development Center and Physical Plant expansion; and, $460,000 for special maintenance projects, including tennis court resurfacing, campus landscaping and lighting improvements.

A lump sum allocation from the Bureau of Budget and Management for 14 small remodeling projects totaling $524,000. These requests are to correct hazardous conditions and deficiencies in buildings and to alter spaces for departments in the College of Applied Sciences.

Further Guidelines

A compensation and classification study for 605 Western clerical and technical employees was approved Friday by the WMU Board of Trustees.

The clerical/technical (CT) study involved a comprehensive six-month review of position allocations by the University Personnel Office and a 15-member Benchmark Evaluation Committee.

The Trustees' approval permits an immediate across-the-board adjustment of $20 per position for all positions in the study, retroactive to July 1, 1974, according to the salary schedules in effect June 30, 1974.

"This adjustment, in addition to the recent policy change whereby the University Personnel Office determines the 10 per cent retirement contribution of the individual employee's five per cent retirement contribution, is consistent with the 5 per cent increase in compensation granted to all other employee groups," explained Robert E. Wetnig, vice president for finance.

The objectives of the study, noted were to compare and classify each job with others in the same specialty and with business firms in the communities, and to develop a salary structure consistent with similar jobs in the Kalamazoo area.

Implementation of the C/T study in 1974-75 will also include an upgrade in compensation for 1975, to the minimum for all personnel in the study who have met the minimum for their grade as indicated by the study, this involves approximately 300 employees.

In 1975-76, the University hopes to fund the adjustment to minimum on an annual basis; will prepare a revised schedule to account for cost-of-living from 1974-75 to 1975-76, and will move toward appropriation in "grade" adjustments.

Grant Ansel, Maus Emeritus Status

Requests for retirement from two WMU staff members, with a combined record of 57 years of service to the University, were approved Friday by the Board of Trustees.

 Granted emeritus status were: Dr. James O. Ansel, professor of teacher education and director of rural life and education; and Clayton J. Maus, dean of records and registrar.

In 1975, Dr. Ansel was appointed assistant registrar and was named registrar in 1955, he was named registrar.

A native of Cass County, Ind., Maus received his B.S., degree in 1933 from Ashland (Ohio) College and a Master of Arts degree in 1939 and coached basketball and track at Aven Lake, Ohio, 1933-36.

He was president of the College Colleage Conference in 1952, president of Michigan Association of College Registrars and Admissions Officers, 1963-64, and secretary-treasurer of the Michigan College Association. 1951-52. Maus is listed in Who's Who in American Education, 1958 and, in 1961, he was named to the planning administration group of eight consultants to Grand Valley State College. He is also past president of the Kalamazoo League.

In other action, the Trustees approved the retirement of Dr. Alexander Body, assistant professor and bibliographer in Waldo Library, on June 20, 1976, for 32 years of service to the University, earned a Doctor of Political Science degree at Elisabeth University Pecs in Hungary in 1934 and a Master of Science in Librarian from WMU in 1966.
