Sales program nationally recognized for excellence

WMU’s sales and business marketing program has been identified for the 12th year in a row by the Sales Education Foundation as a top national program that both prepares students for careers in professional selling and helps elevate the sales profession. With 320 students and more than 1,600 alumni, WMU’s program is one of the largest in the country.

“Our faculty works hard to provide a rigorous curriculum, setting our students up to excel,” says Steve Newell, associate VP, two unit head appointments announced

WMU President Edward Montgomery has appointed Tony Proudfoot, interim senior vice president for marketing and communications at the University of Arizona, as vice president for marketing and strategic communication, effective Wednesday, June 27.

Proudfoot was one of three final candidates in the nationwide search to fill the newly created position at WMU, which is charged with providing the vision and leadership to advance institutional marketing and communication as well as lead the Office of University Relations.

In addition, two other administrative vacancies, both for existing positions, will be filled this summer.

Staci Perryman-Clark, WMU associate professor of English, has been appointed associate dean of the Lee Honors College, effective Wednesday, Aug. 1, and WMU alumna Alicia Kornowa, director of admissions for recruitment at the University of Cincinnati, has been tapped to lead the Office of Admissions, effective Monday, July 30.

Tony Proudfoot

Proudfoot comes to Kalamazoo as a leader with more than two decades of experience in marketing and communications at major universities. At WMU, he will work collaboratively with all units to integrate marketing and communication efforts to further elevate the stature of the University.

Fostering success center announces new partner, transition plans

The University’s Center for Fostering Success, the organizational structure under which WMU’s award-winning Seita Scholars Program and a statewide college network operates, has announced a new partnership and plans for a summer of transitions, reorganization and personnel changes.

The mission of the center, its Seita program and the statewide network that grew out of the initiative remains the same—to increase the graduation rate and career achievements among youth who have aged out of Michigan’s foster care system. The WMU center is now collaborating with The New Foster Care—TNFC—a Bloomfield Hills-based organization focused on making an impact and spurring positive systemic change in Michigan’s foster care system. Over the coming months, TNFC will take over some major functions of Fostering Success Michigan, the statewide network that works to expand college, campus-based support programs.

The decision to recast the organizational structure was triggered by several factors, according to WMU’s Yvonne Uhr, director of the Center for Fostering Success and one of the founders of the Seita Scholars Program. A grant to fund long-term sustainability strate-
Summer entertainment continues
Next up in the Broncos Night Out series will be live music featuring Boardman Brown Friday, June 8. Outdoor games will begin at 7 p.m. and the show will begin on the outdoor stage at 7:30 p.m.

The series, organized by development and alumni relations, takes place on Heritage Hall’s Grand Lawn. All Bronco alumni, families and fans are invited to these open-air monthly events featuring free outdoor entertainment and snacks.

Montgomery to speak in Southfield
Edward Montgomery, WMU’s ninth president, will be the featured speaker at a special luncheon in Metro Detroit to celebrate the first year of his presidency. Montgomery will provide a University update and cast his ambitious vision for the future in a presentation titled “A Year in Review from WMU President Montgomery.”

The event is set for 11:30 a.m. Thursday, June 28, in the Westin Southfield’s Charlevoix Ballroom in Southfield, Michigan. Attendees will enjoy a fresh chef-prepared lunch buffet and a selection of desserts. Remarks will begin at 12:15 p.m. The cost is $25 per person. Free, convenient on-site parking will be available in front of the hotel. To obtain more information or register, visit bit.ly/2LR6twk.

Canadian scholar earns WMU’s 2018 Gründler Prize
A Canadian scholar who specializes in Middle English literature earned WMU’s 2018 Otto Gründler Book Prize for his volume that investigates the widespread belief in fairies and fairyland in medieval culture.

Richard Firth Green, a Humanities Distinquished Professor of English Emeritus at Ohio State University, won for “Elf Queens and Holy Friars: Fairy Beliefs and the Medieval Church.”

This year’s prize, which comes with a $1,000 cash award, was announced at WMU’s 53rd International Congress on Medieval Studies—one of the world’s largest medieval scholar gatherings.

Profes receive mentoring project grant
Jennifer Heymoss, clinical experiences, and Regenia Falls Nelson, teaching, learning and educational studies, have been awarded a $25,638 grant from the Michigan Department of Education.

The grant will fund the Leading the Next Generation of Teachers: WMU Summer Institute, which is designed for teachers in partnering area districts to gain coaching skills to mentor new teachers and lead professional learning communities focused on improving student mastery in mathematics and English.

Heymoss and Nelson are being joined on the project by Jill Herrman-Wilmarth, teaching, learning and educational studies; Kate Kline, mathematics; and Cody Williams, Mallinson Institute. Heymoss, Nelson, Herrman-Wilmarth and Kline will all lead professional development sessions at the summer institute. Williams will perform the project evaluation.

Counselor starts endowed fund
Joseph Morris, counselor education and counseling psychology, has bequeathed a gift that creates the Joseph R. Morris Endowed Professorship in Race and Psychology. The fund will enable his department to recruit and retain faculty who have made exceptional contributions to the study of race in counseling psychology or race and psychology.

Morris came to the Department of Counselor Education and Counseling Psychology in 1984 as the first African American tenure-track faculty member in the department. Over the past 34 years of his WMU career, he has left a legacy of instilling multiculturalism into the fabric of the department through his leadership as well as his scholarship.

Morris also is actively engaged in community outreach projects that benefit students in the Kalamazoo Public Schools.

Educator selected as writing fellow
Charlotte Thralls, English, has been chosen by the Association of Teachers of Technical Writing to be elevated to the position of fellow. She was the only person to be so elevated this year.

The honor recognizes those who have made significant long-term contributions to technical communication, and only members who have established national reputations based on their teaching, scholarship or academic administration are considered.

In bestowing the award, the presenter said, “Professor Thralls, your contribution to the appropriateness of this recognition.”
Executive board room at medical campus named for Dunns

The executive board room at the W.E. Upjohn M.D. Campus was renamed May 22 to honor WMU’s former president and his wife.

The third-floor conference room will now be known as the Dr. John M. and Linda T. Dunn Executive Board Room after a celebration and unveiling in honor of the Dunns.

“The evening was very, very special, as was the setting and the people who participated, and of course the unveiling of the signage acknowledging not only me, but also, importantly, my wife, Linda,” said John Dunn, who retired as president of WMU in August 2017 and is now a professor emeritus at WMed and president emeritus of WMU.

The naming of the executive board room is in recognition of a significant gift to WMed from the Dunns.

Laws change prescribing practice for certain meds

In response to dramatic increases in opioid overdoses and deaths, several new laws covering opioid and controlled substance prescribing in Michigan took effect June 1. The laws are aimed at preventing harm occurring as a result of opioid misuse and opioid use or abuse. Patients receiving pain-relieving medications at medical offices and pharmacies across the state, including Sindecuse Health Center, will be affected.

“Opioids such as Norco, Percodan, Oxycontin and even cough syrup containing codeine will now have added regulations,” says Jim Middleton, Sindecuse pharmacy.

Arcadia awards WMU-KVCC sustainable brewing scholarship

A student in the WMU-Kalamazoo Valley Community College joint sustainable brewing program is the first to receive a scholarship in support of women in the industry from Arcadia Brewing Company.

Junior Ellie Maddelen of Naperville, Illinois, pictured with Arcadia brewer Col Dykstra, will receive a $2,000 scholarship for 2018-19 in recognition of her successful performance in the rigorous sustainable brewing curriculum.

Support for sustainable brewing scholarships is provided by companies and individuals to strengthen the educational ties between WMU, KVCC and the brewing industry. Maddelen’s award is specifically provided by Arcadia to further enhance career and learning opportunities for women in brewing.

Arcadia inaugurated the scholarship fund in 2017 as part of its annual Arcadia Ales Classic golf outing. A portion of the proceeds from the event were used to establish scholarships for students in the institutions’ joint sustainable brewing program. This year’s golf outing takes place Monday, Sept. 24, at Moon Golf Club in Portage, Michigan. More information will be available at arcadiaales.com.

On Campus

Lindsey Palar's new title and responsibilities in the Office of Diversity and Inclusion are a testament to the University’s commitment to growing inclusive programs across campus.

Formerly program coordinator, Palar became director of diversity education in May. She continues to promote valuable diversity programs such as the Everyone Counts Learning Communities (applications for which are being accepted through Wednesday, June 20), the Real Talk Diversity Series, and MLK Celebration activities and other office functions, as well as works to make the office a campuswide resource. Her new role better defines her directive to coordinate these efforts across campus.

“I’m really passionate about how we develop opportunities on campus, especially for faculty and staff because these are the individuals who are positioned to provide a truly inclusive experience for our students,” she says. “[The director position] is exciting in that it provides more opportunity to collaborate across campus.”

Palar was raised in Kalamazoo and earned a bachelor’s degree from Hope College and a master’s degree from the University of Michigan. She worked at a nonprofit organization in Dearborn, Michigan, working alongside a diverse population in Metro Detroit, including Arab-American immigrants and refugees starting or growing small businesses.

In 2015, she returned to Kalamazoo to be near her family, worked in substance abuse counseling for a while and joined WMU, drawn by a desire to work in a setting that encourages ongoing education and growth, social justice, and openness to equality.

“I feel that there is a responsibility and opportunity in higher education to carry out critical work. So many important shifts are happening at WMU and in much broader context nationally and internationally,” Palar says. “I strive to balance what I know about the historical context at WMU with what we know today and how to best serve our campus community. Admittedly, I want it to move much faster,” she reflects. “I have to remind myself that real change takes time.”

Palar and her partner, Paul Vugteveen, live in Kalamazoo with several pets. They own a vegan food catering business, OPEN Vegan Eats, and are committed to participating in social justice events in the greater Kalamazoo area.

VP, two unit head appointments announced forward, ‘transformational change’ has been our guiding principle and our goal for every major aspect of this institution. I believe Tony Proudfoot has the transformational ideas, experience and thinking to reshape and elevate our efforts in marketing, brand positioning and communication,” Montgomery says.

“Our challenge is to make WMU the university of choice for this region and beyond. Tony’s results-oriented approaches and deep expertise in higher education marketing will be crucial to this work.”

Greg Rosine, vice president for government affairs and university relations, will continue to serve as vice president for government affairs while assisting Proudfoot in his transition to campus and the university relations office.

“I am honored and humbled to be entrusted with the responsibility of strengthening the University’s brand. WMU’s strengths were apparent almost immediately when I stepped on campus,” Proudfoot says.

“Reimagining how we present those strengths to the world will enable WMU to become an undisputed first choice. I look forward to working collaboratively across the University to focus our greatest assets into a clear, compelling voice that attracts attention, students, research talent and financial support.”

Since 2015, Proudfoot has served as associate vice president for marketing communications and brand management at the University of Arizona.

This past January, he was tapped to additionally serve as the university’s interim senior vice president for marketing and communications. Previously, Proudfoot spent eight years at Ball State University, where he was associate vice president for marketing and communications.

Staci Perryman-Clark

The new associate dean of the Lee Honors College has been director of First-Year Writing at WMU since 2010 and also is serving in her second year as associate director of the Office of Faculty Development.

Perryman-Clark is a champion for understanding cultural diversity in the teaching of writing and a key leader in the creation of the University’s new general education program, WMU Essential Studies.

Her work focuses on creating culturally relevant pedagogies and curricular designs to support all students’ expository writing practices. She is a nationally recognized expert on Afrocentric pedagogy in relation to language rights for writing students.

Alicia Kornowa

Kornowa was selected as the University’s director of admissions following a nationwide search. She will be developing prospecting, recruiting and yield activities to meet enrollment targets and priorities.

She has spent the past six years at the University of Cincinnati, where she now leads a 24-person team and manages marketing, recruitment and yield activities for domestic first-year and transfer students.

Previously, Kornowa was senior associate director of admissions at Cornell University. She also has held positions at the University of South Florida, the University of Central Florida and WMU, where she was assistant director of admissions and orientation.
