ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to express my appreciation to the members of my advisory committee, Drs. Paul Fuller, Malcolm Robertson, and Donna Henderson. They provided assistance in both the research and the project report that is presented here. I have benefited from their direction, encouragement, constructive criticism, and technical expertise, and I have learned from the knowledge, skills, and insights that they were willing to share. They were especially understanding of the hardships imposed by residing over 250 miles from the University. I had the support of many, when for example, a very little boy seemed to instinctively understand why his daddy couldn't go sliding with him. While my advisory committee had a real and direct effect on this project report, I assume full responsibility for what is written here.

INFORMATION TO USERS

This material was produced from a microfilm copy of the original document. While the most advanced technological means to photograph and reproduce this document have been used, the quality is heavily dependent upon the quality of the original submitted.

The following explanation of techniques is provided to help you understand markings or patterns which may appear on this reproduction.

1. The sign or “target” for pages apparently lacking from the document photographed is “Missing Page(s)”. If it was possible to obtain the missing page(s) or section, they are spliced into the film along with adjacent pages. This may have necessitated cutting thru an image and duplicating adjacent pages to insure you complete continuity.

2. When an image on the film is obliterated with a large round black mark, it is an indication that the photographer suspected that the copy may have moved during exposure and thus cause a blurred image. You will find a good image of the page in the adjacent frame.

3. When a map, drawing or chart, etc., was part of the material being photographed the photographer followed a definite method in “sectioning” the material. It is customary to begin phoetoing at the upper left hand corner of a large sheet and to continue phoetoing from left to right in equal sections with a small overlap. If necessary, sectioning is continued again — beginning below the first row and continuing on until complete.

4. The majority of users indicate that the textual content is of greatest value, however, a somewhat higher quality reproduction could be made from “photographs” if essential to the understanding of the dissertation. Silver prints of “photographs” may be ordered at additional charge by writing the Order Department, giving the catalog number, title, author and specific pages you wish reproduced.

5. PLEASE NOTE: Some pages may have indistinct print. Filmed as received.

THE PROBLEM AND ITS BACKGROUND

During the time that the topic of this specialists' project was being researched, it became somewhat apparent that many, if not most, metropolitan areas seemed to have available a Directory of Community Agency Resources. In June of 1973 when this project was initiated, there were no recent comprehensive Directories of Community Agency Resources available in either Charlevoix or Emmet Counties. Several "old" directories existed, but they were incomplete, outdated, extremely limited in their scope and depth, or focused on a specific community. Since 1966, when the most recent of the previous directories was published, this area has grown considerably and many new services and resources have come into existence and many present services have expanded their breadth and scope. The survey that was being contemplated was intended to cover both Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. The reasons for this are that this area is served by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District which provides ancillary and consultative services for special education to these areas and that these regions are linked geographically, ideologically, philosophically and by several major highways. At the time this survey was initiated, several state agencies had received a directive from their regional offices directing them to initiate a county-wide "central file" of resources and services for their own use, underscoring the need for a directory such as this.

The need for and usefulness of this type of directory cannot be overemphasized. A comprehensive survey of services currently available in the community could identify areas where present services are more than adequate as well as suggesting some areas where services are non-existent or inadequate, or where unmet needs exist. A directory of this type can provide quick, accurate and easy access to a large body of information which could be of great value to case workers, school counselors, administrators, clergy, health care workers, psychologists, social workers and other professionals in their effort to meet the needs of those that they are pledged to serve. Many varied and effective services are available in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, but they are of little use if the service personnel and the potential recipients of that service are not aware that the service exists. A directory that identified sources of assistance for an unwed mother would be of real value to a counselor if it suggested agencies and identified appropriate persons to contact. A referral might be appropriate for individual psycho-therapy, legal advice, pre-natal and neo-natal care, pregnancy testing, contraceptives, educational or vocational programs, delivery, financial aid, abortion referral, adoption services, and so on. Such a directory would be even more of a service if it included a description of the nature, type and extent of the services offered and included qualifications, costs if any, and the name, address and telephone number of a representative of the agency who could be contacted to arrange for services or provide more detailed information.
SURVEY OF THE LITERATURE

As mentioned in the first section, most metropolitan areas have a directory of community agency resources of some type. Directories for the communities of Kalamazoo, Lansing, Detroit, the Tri-County Detroit Metropolitan area, and Traverse City were obtained. They provided a great deal of insight and assistance in such matters as what agencies may be included and excluded in the survey and what types of services are available in that type and size community. Actually, it was quite discouraging to note the services that were available in some of these directories which are not available in the Charlevoix-Emmet area, such as, Emergency Shelter Homes, legal aid, neuro-psychiatric care, and housing commissions. In some respects, however, a comparison between Charlevoix and Emmet Counties and other areas throughout the state indicated that this area is extremely fortunate to have some of the resources and services that it has. The school age population in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, 12,000, have available to them three hospitals, a medical clinic with a staff of more than 50 specialists, a four-bed psychiatric unit, a tuberculosis unit and a mental health clinic to name just a few. In the larger metropolitan areas studied, most of the services were available in the immediate area, whereas in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties many services operate out of a regional office, such as the Vocational Rehabilitation Services office which is located in Traverse City, which is over 50 miles away and long distance by telephone. Also, many services are available in the Charlevoix and Emmet areas on a one day a week basis because of the large geographic area served by such agencies. Unfortunately, no directories existed or were available for an area comparable to the Charlevoix and Emmet areas to serve as a basis of comparison or to provide a model. A directory of facilities offering residential care for various types of disabilities was obtained during the research as the need for this type of information became very apparent and was not within the scope of this survey. The Department of Social Services in Charlevoix County provided a booklet from their state office that contained many useful suggestions on procedural and methodological points on conducting a survey of community agency resources, what to do with the data once it had been collected, and so on. For example, the booklet contained suggestions of general categories to group the various services in which was very helpful (and would have been even more helpful had it been available at the time the researcher was grappling with that problem). Two directories that had been prepared previously were obtained, but generally these directories were outdated (Circa, 1966-68), incomplete, and limited in their scope in that they focused on one small, metropolitan community within the county. A textbook for a college course dealing with community agency resources expounded the value of and necessity for a knowledge of such resources and services, but offered few helpful suggestions for completing such a survey for a rural, geographically isolated area consisting of many autonomous entities. An area such as Charlevoix or Emmet County has many idiosyncracies. For example, in a large metropolitan area, most agencies offer a specific, specialized type of service, while in this area, one agency or association may handle several types of highly dissimilar services or provide a service ostensibly unrelated to the name of the agency. The Emmet County Chapter of the American Red Cross operates a program called "Operation Find" which assists the elderly to obtain food stamps. Another example is found with the Charlevoix-Emmet Association for Retarded Children, which operates a sheltered employment program or workshop for mentally and/or physically handicapped adults. In general, the material examined dealing with other surveys provided helpful information on setting up the survey, how to obtain data, sources of information, which services or agencies may be included or excluded. They were an excellent source of information as to what kinds of services are available in other communities, and provided an interesting comparison. Most of the surveys, however, focused on a specific geographic location or a large metropolitan area. The literature contained little information on and few surveys are available dealing with a widely dispersed, geographical region such as Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. And, special problems arise when several small autonomous cities are being included in a single directory. For example, some services are available in one area but not in another, or are provided by one association in Charlevoix County and by another agency in Emmet County. Some agencies, it was discovered, have assimilated the function of an agency that no longer provides that service.
The most important step in conducting a successful survey of community agency resources is to have or to develop a master plan of how this survey is going to be completed. Such a plan should include a timetable and detail how and when the survey will be conducted. The plan should identify how the information will be obtained, what groups will be contacted, what information will be requested, how the information will be compiled and tabulated, what criteria will be used to edit the data, how and when the information will be duplicated and how and to whom it will be distributed. While the need for a "master plan" is obvious, this is a step often overlooked. A master plan eliminates duplications of time, resources, and effort. For example, by determining that the "description of services" that each agency was asked to submit was to be edited by the director of that agency, the need to duplicate any efforts and re-contact an agency was avoided. The master plan must be flexible because as it is confronted by reality, modifications become necessary. A master plan is also useful in helping define the major goals that the survey is intended to achieve and will help translate the long-term goals into smaller, more readily obtainable, short-term goals. It was also found to be highly beneficial, if not necessary, to tie each of the goals to a time limit or time table as the enormity of the task was at times overwhelming and produced a tendency to become apathetic and to succumb to the "manana syndrome" of "oh, I'll do it tomorrow." It is also advisable to conduct the survey as quickly and over as short a period as possible so that the information obtained does not become outdated before the survey is published. This also allows the researcher to plan and schedule his time.

Once the master plan is formulated it may be helpful to share it with "significant others" in the environment. It was found, for example, that the Director of Special Education for the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, my major advisor, Dr. Fuller, and even my secretary were able and willing to offer suggestions that in several cases resulted in savings of time, money and effort. For example, the Director of Special Education suggested having the directory printed by the Graphic Arts Department of a local high school and a secretary suggested that the editor of a local newspaper might be able to provide the names and telephone numbers of some agencies or associations that the researcher was not aware of or familiar with. They were often able to see potential problems from a fresh perspective and to make helpful suggestions.

Once the "plan" is formulated, the next step is to define the terminology and the limits. Questions such as what geographic and age groups will be included and what constitutes a resource or service must be answered. For example, Charlevoix and Emmet Counties seem to be comprised of an almost limitless number of service clubs, extension clubs, sportsman clubs, and so on. While these groups provide a service, their service is primarily in the area of vested self-interest or might better be defined as "community service". While community service is obviously a worthwhile endeavor, these kinds of associations were excluded from the survey because the service which they provided was not directed towards a specific group, type of problem, or handicap. At this stage of the survey, the topic or title of the project was modified several times. For example, the survey originally focused on the 0-25 age group as outlined by Mandatory Special Education (Public Act 198) but it quickly became apparent that this was unrealistic. Those resources and services appropriate and available to an age group of 0-25 years old were for the most part identical to those that served the general population. Then, too, a therapeutic intervention program designed to help a school age child's personal-social adjustment in most cases will involve his family. It is unrealistic to attempt to help a child and ignore his environment. For example, it is clearly conceivable that a child's social adjustment could be improved by referring the parents for marriage counseling or by referring them to the Michigan Employment Security Commission if the circumstances indicated that this was appropriate.

The next step in the survey of community agency resources was to compile a list of associations, agencies, and resources that were to be included in the survey. The list that was compiled included local services only, as a directory of state agencies and residential placements for various disabilities was available. As the area and population being surveyed was a two-county area, it seemed more expedient to work on one county at a time. The researcher was more familiar with the Emmet County area due to three years of experience in the field of school psychology. Social and professional contacts were questioned, the telephone directory was examined, previous surveys were studied, the list of agencies supported by the United Community Fund was obtained, and even the editor of a local newspaper was questioned in an effort to obtain as comprehensive a list as possible of all agencies, public and private, associations, and services providing services in Emmet County. Interestingly and ironically, the most valuable sources of information were the associations and agencies that were being contacted. The method used in this survey to obtain the information required from each agency was a personal contact or by telephone. As each agency or resource was contacted, the current list of agencies included in this survey was shared with each agency to determine if the agency was able to add to the list to make it more complete. In many cases, the agencies were not only able to add to the list but took great pleasure in doing so. Many of the agencies and associations have a "working office file" of the other agencies that they refer to and from whom they receive referrals. Interestingly, the researcher obtained the names of some associations and agencies in the Emmet County area that were unfamiliar even after having served that area for over three years.

Once the identity of an agency or resource had been determined, an effort was made to personally contact that agency and obtain the required information. Here the researcher had to adopt the role of "detective" because it was difficult to determine the identity and telephone number of a well informed representative of some associations. In several cases, three or four calls were necessary before the "right" person was reached. For example, the information from the Parents Without Partners group required several contacts just to determine the name of a present member, and when that member was con­tacted the request for information was refused and the researcher was referred to the president of the group. Interestingly, inquiries were often met with hesitations ("Now! Who are you and why are you asking me this?") even after the researcher had identified himself and explained the nature and purpose of the inquiry!

The information obtained from each agency included a brief description of the service, who the potential recipients of this ser­vice were, cost, if any, the requirements for this service, and the name, address and telephone number of a representative of the agency who could be contacted if more information or services were desired.
The data obtained from this phase of the research was then placed on 3x5 cards for alphabetizing, indexing and editing. The cards were attached to a large circular metal ring to be sure that no cards were misplaced or out of order.

Although it may have been more expedient to contact all of the agencies-by the use of a mailing list, it was felt to be more beneficial to make a personal contact. The experience of contacting over two hundred agencies and associations proved to be educational in the true sense for several reasons. Many personal acquaintanceships were initiated, and a first hand, working knowledge of community agency resources in this area was obtained. A great deal of insight and knowledge was gained into the social structure and the power structure of the community and into the inner workings of a bureaucracy. The researcher learned first hand the distinction between I-CAPS, II-CAPS, Once the data had been obtained, edited, and alphabetized, a decision was made as to what extent the information provided by the agencies would be edited. For example, in some cases an agency stated that they provided a specific service while the researcher's personal experience suggested that this was not the case. It was decided that if an agency stated that they provided a service, then that was the way it would appear in the directory. The reasoning for this was that if enough demand was made for a service or if the present services were inadequate, improvement or at least change might well result. Another problem encountered was that several service clubs actually provided a very specific and useful type of service. For example, the Lions' Club traditionally has a sight conservation program which is a very valuable resource. Due to the intimacy, size and nature of this community, it was pointed out to this researcher that "if you're gonna include some service club, by golly, ya better put in all of the clubs". Since this could affect the community's response to the directory and the extent to which the directory would be used, some concessions were made in this case. The decision was made, however, to list each "type" of club once even though many clubs actually exist in the area. The reasoning was that if someone desired more information they could obtain it by calling the "primary" listing, and that the clubs sponsored similar types of projects.

After this phase of the survey was completed, a similar approach was used with Charlevoix County. In some respects, the research in Charlevoix County was not as difficult because many of the agencies providing services in Emmet County also provided services in Charlevoix County or at least had a "counterpart" in Charlevoix County. The agencies that had been contacted in Emmet County were very helpful in providing detailed information on who to contact in Charlevoix County. However, as indicated previously, since the researcher was not as intimately familiar with the Charlevoix area, this phase of the research quickly became more difficult. It became apparent that because of a lack of familiarity with Charlevoix County and because of the magnitude of the task of surveying a two-county area, it would be expedient to obtain some assistance. When the purpose and value of this survey was discussed with some agencies, several offers of help were received. The Department of Social Services for Charlevoix County, and especially the director, Mr. Richard Tillen, were very helpful; Mr. Tillen became so interested in the survey that he offered to publish the survey for Charlevoix County and to provide access to his resource file, secretarial help, paper, and the use of a telephone. Without this help the survey would have been nearly impossible.

The next phase of the research was the most difficult. It involved developing meaningful categories in which to place the over 100 listings per county that had been acquired. While the directories from other areas provided some help, the uniqueness of the Charlevoix and Emmet areas made this a difficult task. General categories were developed, such as "mental retardation" and this area was then broken down into diagnostic services, educational and training programs, employment, and vocational training, supportive services and financial aid. The listings were then placed in the appropriate categories. The most expedient method for doing this, interestingly, was to find a large wall and tape the categorical subject headings on the wall. Each of the cards then was examined and placed in the appropriate categories. The term categories was used because many of the agencies provided services to more than one type of handicap, disability or segment of the population. A "double check" system was employed at this point. As indicated, first each of the cards describing an agency was examined and placed in the appropriate categories and a list was made. Then the process was reversed and each category was examined while all the data cards were carefully scrutinized to see if they fit into the particular category being considered at this time.

The directory was typed, proofread and corrections were made. It was then sent to the print shop of the Vocational Education Division of a local senior high school where over 250 copies were printed. The costs, which ran over $185 for Emmet County alone, were paid for by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District and by the Charlevoix Department of Social Services. Both of these agencies felt that the directory was beneficial to the community and were willing to pay the publication costs as a public service and as good public relations (and saved the researcher a considerable amount of money). The directory was printed on "looseleaf" paper for inclusion in a three-ring type of notebook. The reason for this was that as changes or corrections were made in the directory, specific pages could be reprinted and added to the notebook rather than having the entire directory reprinted. A copy of the survey was then sent to all contributing agencies. Each agency was asked to contribute the names of any services or agencies that had been overlooked, to modify their listing if they wished, to inform me of any errors, and to notify the publishers if some aspect of their service changed. Both the Intermediate School District and the Department of Social Services established a procedure and appointed a staff person responsible for keeping the survey up to date. For example, if the director of an agency left the agency, or if the type of services rendered by the agency changed, each agency was asked to send that information to the person appointed by the Intermediate School District or the Department of Social Services. This aspect of the project was felt to be crucial as a directory tends to be outdated quickly as services and contact people change and as new programs are added. Copies of the directory were then supplied to all contributing agencies, services, associations local physicians, ministers, libraries, schools, clinics, Chambers of Commerce, and so on. Many agencies, such as the Department of Social Services, the Intermediate School District and the Mental Health Clinic, received several copies of the directory.

The section on methodology would hardly be complete without a section or paragraph entitled "Things I Learned the Hard Way". Such a list would include the following:

1. The parameters for the project were well defined in terms of what would be included and what population would be surveyed. However, the project, in reality, was too large for one person. A two-county area is unmanageable particularly if the surveyor does not have a first hand acquaintance with one of the areas.

2. Too much time elapsed between the initiation of the survey and the publication date. This resulted in some of the information being outdated at the time of publication and in reality, made the survey more difficult to handle. This type of project would best be completed during one semester when a person could direct his efforts to this project full time.

3. It is suggested that a cut-off date be established. It seemed that the list of agencies and resources became almost endless as each day or each week the researcher learned of some new agency that should perhaps be included in the survey.

4. It is suggested that the local boards that are legally charged with the responsibility for determining needs and providing comprehensive programs for the community, such as the Act 54 Board, be involved in the early stages of the survey. It has been this researcher's experience that these boards are then more open to the suggestions and recommendations that the survey produces.

5. It is more expedient to request the desired information from each agency by letter and have them formulate their response in writing. Although this eliminates the opportunity for personal contact, it is more expedient in terms of time and effort.

6. It is advisable to have the publication costs accounted for before the survey is begun.

7. This directory and the survey reflected the biases of the researcher, who approached the task from the perspective of an educator involved in the area of mental health.

If this paper is to be of any lasting value, this section on methodology must not be limited to how to obtain the information and how to publish a directory. In reality, this is only part of an important task that needed to be done. The survey of agencies and the literature suggested many areas where present services are non-existent or inadequate. The section on methodology, then, should indicate how this information was transmitted to those agencies in a position to initiate some changes and meet those needs. Included in the next section is a list of services needed and areas of "abundant service". This information was shared with three boards and commissions at the regional, state and federal level, who are charged with the responsibility of providing comprehensive services to the residents of Charlevoix and Emmet Counties. The researcher sent a letter to each of these agencies asking to appear on their agenda to share the results of the survey with them. Needless to say, some of the boards were not too interested in the survey or willing to consider the suggestions that were made. However, some changes have taken place. For example, the Board of Directors at a local residential summer camp are currently considering initiating a camping program for handicapped children. Also, the Charlevoix-Emmet area now has available the services of a neurologist who is trained in the administration of an electroencephalograph.
RESULTS

Appendix A contains a copy of "A Directory of Community Agency Resources for Emmet County" and Appendix B contains a copy of the Directory published for Charlevoix County. Over 250 copies of the directory were printed for distribution to appropriate individuals and contributors.

An effort was made to identify those areas where services are "more than adequate" (a phrase suggested by Mr. Richard Tillen, Director of Social Services for Charlevoix County) as well as any areas where present services were non-existant or inadequate. The areas cited below represent the researchers opinion of what constitutes an unmet need, and the criteria for this determination were admittedly subjective. A comparison of services available in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties with services available in other areas suggested many of the items noted below, but equally many areas of unmet needs or areas where services are more than adequate were suggested by years of employment in this area. Also, many of the agencies and associations contacted felt very free to share their opinions with the researcher. Specifically, the Community Coordinated Child Care Committee and the Act 54 Board.

Areas of Unmet Needs

1. There is a need for an agency to coordinate volunteer services and volunteers.

2. There is a need for a central file containing information as to who has received what kind of help from what agencies. If appropriate people had access to this information, much less duplication of time and effort would result. While provisions need to be made to protect the identity and integrity of the clients, this type of service would be of obvious value.

3. Legal aid or legal assistance is almost non-existent in this area. The court will provide counsel to an individual charged only with a criminal offense.

4. A pronounced gap exists in the continuum of educational programs for the so-called "emotionally impaired" children. Children who do not need residential treatment but who cannot function in a normal classroom setting are denied an adequate program. Currently, these children are placed in Type A programs.

5. There are no provisions for emergency shelter care. No facilities exist for runaway children, children "kicked out" of their homes, the abused, or neglected. While foster homes do exist, they are of little assistance in a crisis or emergency.

6. A need for a sheltered workshop exists in the Emmet County area.

7. Adequate residential facilities do not exist in either Charlevoix or Emmet Counties for mentally ill and mentally handicapped persons returning to their home community from state institutions or for persons attending sheltered employment programs.

8. Dental care for the disadvantaged has been a problem in this area, although the Department of Social Services now has a program. The emphasis, however, is not on "preventive" dentistry.
care for children.

10. Although a special education program exists for physically handicapped elementary students, no services or facilities are available at the junior and senior high level.

11. Vocational education programs for mentally impaired high school students are currently inadequate. Special education students are expected to participate in general education vocational programs.

12. A summer camp experience for handicapped children is currently available only in the Traverse City area.

13. There are no day-care training programs in either Charlevoix or Emmet County.

14. Psychiatric care is inadequate for the economically disadvantaged. The services of a staff psychiatrist are clearly needed by the local Mental Health Clinic on at least a part-time basis.

15. There are no credit counseling services available.

16. There is a need for a housing commission and for low-cost public housing.

17. There is a need for a transportation authority. Many services are available in the area but are inaccessible to someone lacking transportation.

18. The Intermediate School District is currently developing a pre-school speech and language clinic which is clearly needed.

19. Many areas in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties are without access to pre-school programs such as Title I or Head Start.

20. No educational programs are available or designed for unwed mothers. Pregnant girls who are currently unwilling or unable to attend school have no other options.

21. Abortion referral and abortion counseling services are available but that is the extent of the service in this area.

22. Apprenticeship programs to trade unions are extremely limited.

23. Until very recently, the services of a neurologist were available in Traverse City only.

24. A need exists for a local juvenile detention facility.

Basically, the residents of Charlevoix and Emmet Counties are fortunate in the extent, nature and quality of services that are provided. Many of those services that are not provided locally are available in the surrounding areas or can be provided on a contractual basis. While admittedly, there is a low incidence of many types of disabilities, such as visually impaired children or children needing auditory amplification, and while it is admittedly economically unfeasible to provide many kinds of programs and services, it is this author's feeling that the problems identified above do represent areas of unmet needs or inadequate services.

The following is a list of areas where services are "more than adequate" or "abundant", to use the terminology suggested by Mr. Richard Tillen, Director of Social Services for Charlevoix County.

1. Supportive services to physically handicapped children, including medicine, prosthesis, wheel chairs, braces, hospital beds, and transportation are provided by many agencies.

2. Emmet County, particularly the Petoskey area, has a very extensive program for senior citizens.

3. Medical, diagnostic and treatment services for physically handicapped children seem to be more than adequate.

4. Many agencies have employment programs for handicapped and disadvantaged children.

5. An extensive number of agencies, clubs, and organizations provide emergency relief or aid to families. The Department of Social Services is well-equipped to help these families and is a logical agency to at least coordinate the help that a family gets in an emergency.

6. Many different agencies handle adoptions, providing overlap in the areas of supervision, investigation, and counseling.

7. There appear to be no less than three boards or commissions whose primary purpose is to survey the needs, provide and coordinate programs, and to provide a comprehensive range of services for residents of Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

There seem to be many agencies that provide similar services or work with similar types of clients. While this may not represent a serious overlap or duplication of services, and the services seem both necessary and adequate, there seems to be a great deal of what could perhaps be called "provincialism" or "fifedom" that is producing a situation where these agencies are not working together and coordinating their efforts. This seems to produce the kind of situation where the director of an agency says, "This is what we do, and this is how we do it" and is unwilling to see that service as part of a continuum.
or part of a total treatment package. In many instances, the lack of cooperation is related to a basic lack of communication.
COMMENTS

This survey, and the directories that were published as a result of this research, have been of benefit to many. First, the directory is of obvious value to the community in general. Hopefully, the directory has brought to the attention of the community those services that are available and will be of great value to the potential recipients and benefactors of that service. Secondly, the survey is of value to those professionals who provide services to the community. The directory is a quick and accurate source of information of what kinds of help are available to what kinds of people. A service is of little value if those in need of it are unaware of its existence or do not know how or where to obtain the service. Thirdly, the survey may result in greater cooperation and coordination between agencies providing similar kinds of service. Changes have resulted by bringing to the attention of those boards and commissions who are charged with the responsibility of planning and providing comprehensive programs and services, the unmet needs that exist by identifying those areas where services are inadequate or non-existent. This survey and the directories will provide some data for other surveyors as to the nature and extent of services that are available in these northern rural communities for comparison purposes. The survey also may well serve as a "cook book" by providing some specific suggestions for others attempting or contemplating a similar type of survey. This survey has demonstrated the necessity, feasibility, and advisability of completing similar studies in all communities. The survey and particularly the directories, have been greeted by enthusiasm and a spirit of cooperation witnessed by the fact that two separate agencies expressed a willingness to meet the cost of publication (of course, their name is on it as publisher). Fourth, the researcher learned a great deal about the community, its power structure, the bureaucracies that operate in it, and the agencies that provide services. The writer now has first hand knowledge of these services and has met a great many fine people. And, lastly, as an agent of one of those agencies surveyed in the directory, the researcher has discovered that there are many other agencies who provide similar kinds of service to basically the same kinds of clients. This student has learned that we have many problems in common and has learned the value of working together to make this community a better place to live.

This directory was prepared and published by the Intermediate School District as a public service. Its purpose is to be a resource providing information regarding health, welfare, and recreational resources to those professionals providing direct services to residents of Emmet County.

Listed in the directory are public and private, non-profit social agencies, associations and organizations which offer direct service to the citizens of this community. The inclusion of an agency does not constitute an endorsement nor does exclusion indicate disapproval of a program or service.

Constant changes in personnel and services make it impossible to maintain a directory that is complete and up-to-date. However, it is hoped that his directory will demonstrate the need for and usefulness of this type of resource. The author wishes to thank the administrative and secretarial personnel at the Intermediate School District for their guidance and assistance as well as the Touchstone staff and the Petoskey Area Mental Health Clinic.
How to Use This Directory

The directory is divided into three sections. The first section is an alphabetical listing of all the resources comprising the directory and the page numbers on which they are to be found.

The second section is a categorial, or subject, index listing all agencies by name only that may provide some type of service for a given type of problem. Examples to be found in the directory include all the agencies providing help to unwed mothers or to mentally impaired.

The last section, then, is a description of the service each agency or organization provides with the name, address or telephone number of someone to contact to arrange for service or to obtain more detailed information.
