Administrative/cultural friendships

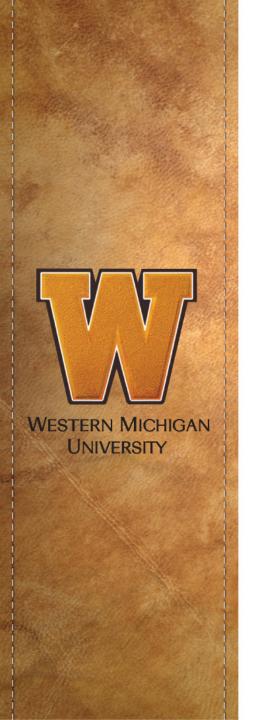

Emerging initiatives

- Faculty-to-faculty partnership with Instituto Técnico Superior Comunitario
 - Weeklong course at ITSC in June
 - ITSC faculty at WMU in July

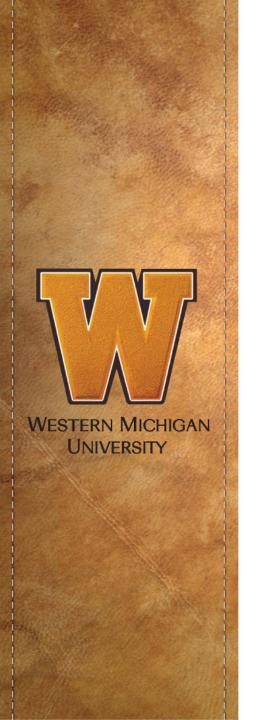

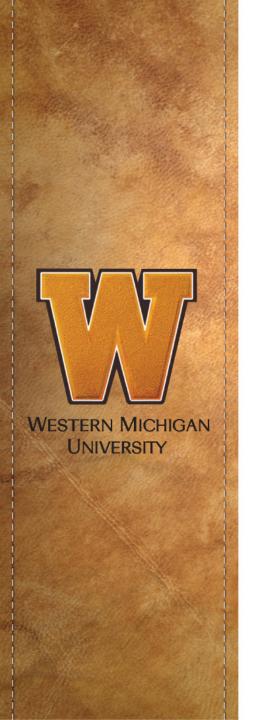

Four collaboration and growth trends that make financial sense

- 1) Leverage partnerships between community colleges and universities
- 2) Expand opportunity by launching privately funded, new graduate or professional programs
- 3) Collaborate with private industry
- 4) Affiliate with other schools to expand graduate and professional opportunities

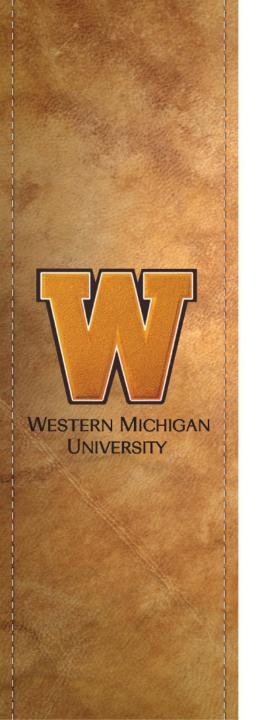

Leverage opportunities that community colleges represent

- Community college partnerships are Integral to WMU's efforts
 - -Reverse transfers
 - -Dual degree programs
 - -Seamless transitions
- The opportunity in the Dominican Republic
 - -A new community college
 - -2,000-plus students who may want to continue
 - -Court them or let them choose

Expand opportunity by launching new privately funded graduate or professional programs

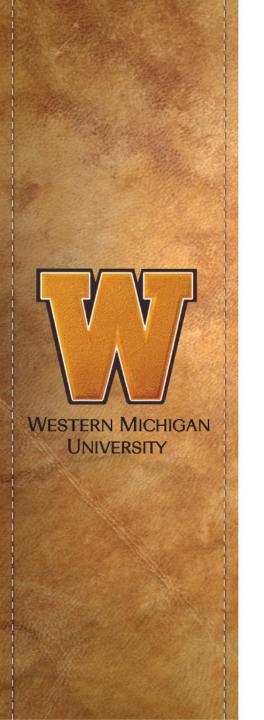

- Allows programs tailored to institution's strengths and emerging academic models
- Requires a vision that appeals to donors who want transformational opportunity
- Demands intense investments of time and resources
- Allows rapid deployment of latest thinking emerging in discipline

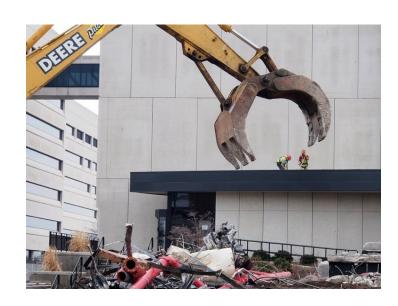

- WMU collaboration with two teaching hospitals in home community
- Launched with $100 million private gift
- First class will enter fall 2014

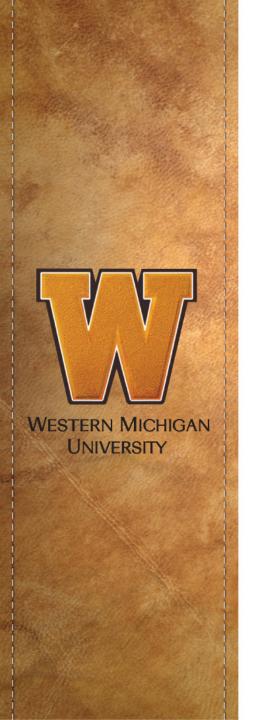

Building given to School of Medicine

Renovation of W.E. Upjohn Campus now underway

Medical school to partner with renowned College of Health and Human Services

- Six graduate programs among the nation's top-100 programs
- Three programs—occupational therapy, physician assistant and speech-language pathology—are in the top 50 in U.S.
- A top research college among schools with allied health programs

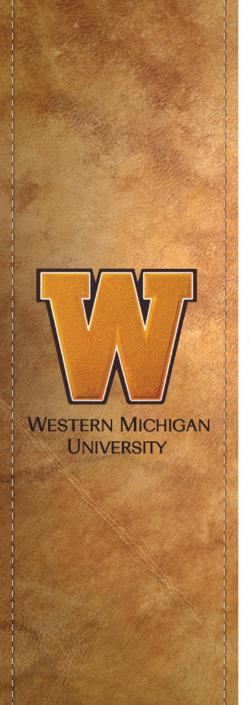

Partner with industry to promote collaboration and allow students to make easy transition to careers

- Advantages to business, higher education and, most of all, students
- Allows closer interaction between industry and degree programs
- Encourages research collaboration
- Offers early career development opportunities for motivated students

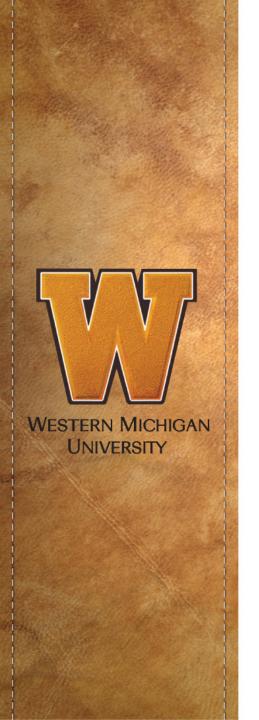

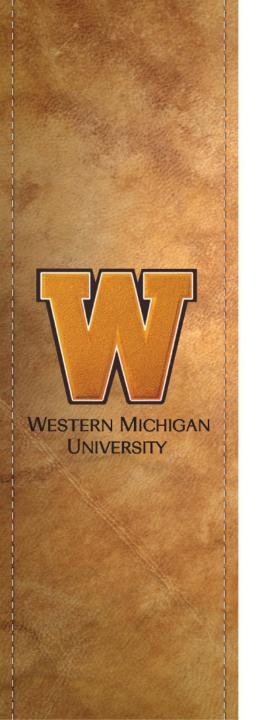

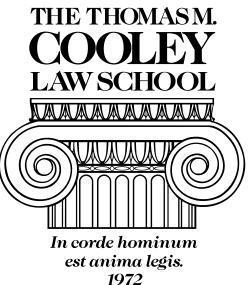

Affiliate with other schools to expand graduate and professional development opportunities

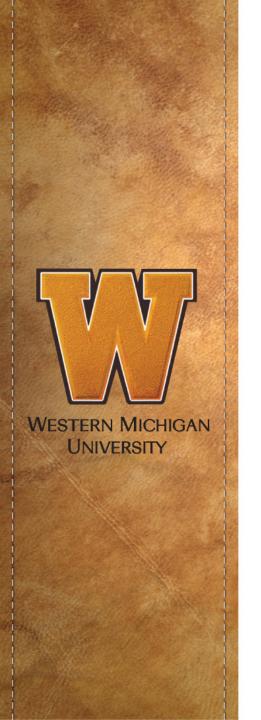

- Leverages the needs and growth desires of two institutions
- Makes maximum use of accrediting and professional organizations' goals
- Requires blending of institutional goals and cultures
- Brings new opportunities to both schools

Affiliation with the Thomas M. Cooley Law School

- Under discussion for years
- Follows decade of academic partnerships
- Approved by both boards
- Leverages the strengths of both schools

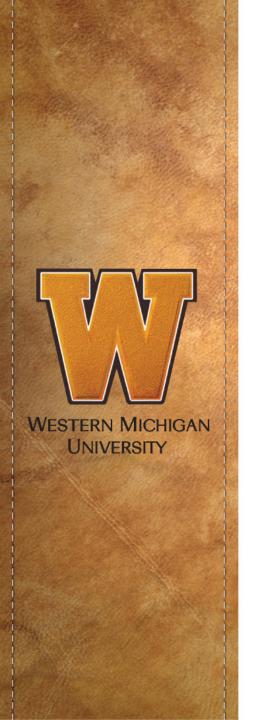

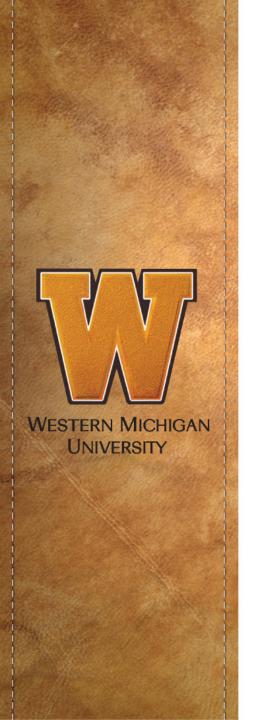

The Western Michigan University Thomas M. Cooley Law School will continue to:

- Be nation's largest, most diverse law school
- Have five campuses in two states—Michigan and Florida

Potential for Ph.D. partnership with Dominican Republic higher ed

- Embraces the Bologna Accord as a model for higher education cooperation.
- It's about best serving the student.
- Maximizes wise use of existing resources.
- Encourages two-way interaction between institutional communities
- Blends technology and in-person instruction to meet student needs.
