York Art:
A Subject List of Extant and Lost Art

A Revision of the List originally prepared for the Early Drama, Art, and Music Reference Series in 1978 by Clifford Davidson and David E. O’Connor (Kalamazoo, Michigan: Medieval Institute Publications; ©1978 by the Board of the Medieval Institute, Western Michigan University).

The following list is not intended to provide a complete description of each example of existing York art from the pre-Reformation period, for such a task would be impossible on account of the immense problems growing out of the condition of surviving painted glass and work in other genres. It is rather a guide, rather like a bibliography in literary studies, intended for scholars with an interest in iconography, art history, ecclesiology, drama, church history, local history, and related subjects. Some items in manuscripts with a less than firm connection with the city of York have been omitted, but woodcuts in pre-Reformation service books, though printed abroad, have been retained since, though representing no doubt the use of woodblocks that the printer had at hand, they nevertheless may reflect the location and general design of illuminations in the original missals, books of hours, etc. Readers are referred to the printed text of York Art for descriptions of both printed books and omitted manuscripts. For two York manuscripts for which illuminations also are not entered in the present list, see Nicholas Rogers, “The Boulogne Hours: An Addition to York Art,” EDAM Newsletter 6 (1984): 35-41, and The Apocalypse: A Series of Seventy-Seven Miniatures from an English Apocalypse Illuminated in York, c.1270, Sotheby’s Sale Catalogue (1983) (brief comment and listing of musical instruments in “An Apocalypse Manuscript from York,” EDAM Newsletter 6 [1983]: 3-5). References to altar lights collected by Angelo Raine in his Mediaeval York (1955) have been added as presumably designating images, though some may have doubts concerning this connection in every instance. Subjects in painted glass are herein cited according to the more precise system devised by the Corpus Vitrearum Medii Aevi rather than by the manner, considered more accessible to non-specialists thirty years ago, in which locations in windows were designated in York Art. References to slides are to the collection of Clifford Davidson; these are available for viewing by appointment at the Medieval Institute, Western Michigan University. For the musical iconography of York, see Davidson and O’Connor, York Art, 185-92.

In each case, hand of God reaches out from upper L in act of creation. Design of Adam panel cannot be relied upon since it was described as “jumble” before restoration (see FAR 19:28). Final panel in this series shows God worshipped by newly created creatures on seventh day; God (center) has crimson face (damaged); 2 ruby angels at top corners; Adam is at lower L below birds; animals at R. Nudity of Adam & Eve striking. Serpent’s face appears to be that of woman; see identification in Torre, Antiquities of Y Minster, 71: “And a serpent twisted about a great Tree like a fair woman with his face toward Eve who is with one hand reaching to take an Apple from the Tree; And with her right hand delivering a golden Apple to Adam, who receives it with his left hand and eats it out of the other elevated to his Mouth.” Il French, Gt E Win, pl. 3.

Speculated to have been a Genesis cycle, as first proposed in 18c by Drake, 484, who reported “the story of Adam and Eve in Paradise, and their expulsion thence.” 19c replacements were replaced in 1996-8. See J. Toy, “The Message of the Genesis Cycle in the Great West Door,” 56–62.
