Trustees to honor veterans at meeting

The next meeting of the WMU Board of Trustees will be held Thursday, April 15. Details will be posted online at www.wmich.edu/news closer to the meeting date. One announced agenda item is the presentation of a U.S. flag to the board by Ed Kluk, information technology.

Afterward, the flag will be raised by an ROTC color guard during a ceremony honoring the service of WMU’s military veterans. All veterans in the campus community are welcome to attend the event at 12:30 p.m. at the Siebert Administration Building’s flagpole.

Kluk, a lieutenant colonel in the Michigan National Guard, was responsible for hoisting the flag at his unit’s forward base in Afghanistan. It will be flown over WMU for about 10 days, then be retired and preserved in a special case.

April 23 deadline for ethics workshop

Teaching assistants and full- and part-time faculty members are invited to learn techniques for teaching ethics in any discipline during a free “Workshop on Teaching Ethics” May 19-21 in the Bernhard Center. Space is limited, so apply by Friday, April 23, to receive full consideration. For details, visit www.wmich.edu/ethics or contact Sandra Borden at sandra.borden@wmich.edu.

E-learning presentations scheduled

WMU is evaluating its learning management system, generically called e-learning, with the prospect of changing to a new licensed product during 2011. As part of the evaluation, all students and faculty members are invited to public presentations of the four leading e-learning solutions. Those attending will be encouraged to submit comments through a written evaluation.

The presentations will be in the Fetzer Center’s Patney Auditorium, and there will be two identical sessions—one from 9 to 11 a.m. and a second from 2 to 4 p.m.—on each of the following four dates: Monday, April 12, Desire2Learn; Thursday, April 15, Moodlerooms; Tuesday, April 20, Sakai; and Thursday, April 22, Blackboard.

Financial representatives to visit WMU

TIAA-CREF representatives will be on campus Tuesday through Thursday, April 13-15, and May 18-20. To schedule a private consultation for investment or retirement planning, visit www.tiaa-cref.org and click Consultations and Seminars under Services. Those unable to register online may call the scheduling group at (800) 732-8353.

Time to register for sports camps

Registration is under way for summer youth camps for girls’ basketball, football, gymnastics, soccer and volleyball under the direction of Bronco varsity coaching staffs. Visit www.wmubroncos.com/camps for details about registering, discounts and more.

WMU administrator selected as ACE Fellow

Susan R. Stapleton, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, has been named an American Council on Education Fellow for the 2010-11 academic year.

The ACE Fellows Program, established in 1965, is designed to strengthen institutions and leadership in American higher education by identifying and preparing promising senior faculty and administrators for responsible positions in college and university administration.

Forty-six fellows, nominated by the presidents or chancellors of their institutions, were selected this year following a rigorous application process. Those selected were announced in Washington, D.C., March 30.

According to ACE officials, most previous fellows have advanced to major positions in academic administration. Of the nearly 1,700 participants in the first 45 years of the program, more than 100 have become chief executive officers and more than 1,100 have become provosts, vice presidents or deans.

Stapleton, who is a professor of chemistry/biochemistry and biological sciences, is a candidate for the position of dean of her college at WMU. She has served as associate dean since 2007, and her areas of responsibility include oversight of curriculum, assessment, accreditation, enrollment and diversity programs.

Each ACE Fellow will focus on an issue of concern to the nominating institution while spending the next academic year or a semester working with a college or university president and other senior officers at a host institution.

The ACE Fellows Program combines retreats, interactive learning opportunities, campus visits and placement at another higher education institution to condense years of on-the-job experience and skills development into a single semester or year. Continued on page 4

Governor makes two trustee appointments for 2011

Gov. Jennifer M. Granholm has announced the appointments of two people to the WMU Board of Trustees to succeed sitting trustees whose appointments will expire at the end of 2010.

Jan. 1, 2011, John T. Cakmakci of Schoolcraft, Mich., and George A. Franklin of Kalamazoo will join the board. Both men will serve eight-year terms that will expire at the end of 2018.

Cakmakci, who will replace William Martin, is executive vice president for the United Food and Commercial Workers Local 991. He is a two-time WMU alumnus, having earned a bachelor’s degree in political science in 1982 and a master’s degree in public administration in 1985.

Franklin, who will replace Kenneth Miller, is president of Franklin Public Affairs and previously served as vice president for public affairs at the Kellogg Co. He earlier served for 12 years on the WMU board when he was appointed in 1989 to fill an unexpired term.

Franklin then was reappointed to a full term and served until May 2001.

New entrepreneurial tools subject of Granholm visit

WMU was the site for a roundtable discussion March 25 with Gov. Jennifer M. Granholm (left) and entrepreneurs who run small-and medium-sized businesses. During the event, Granholm highlighted new tools that the state is making available to those entrepreneurs. Participating in the discussion were WMU President John M. Dunn (right) and other University and state officials. (Photo by Teresa Vennimiglia)

Aviation college observing milestones

The College of Aviation is celebrating its 50-year anniversary as a college, along with 70 years of aviation education at WMU, April 19-24 with daily events in Battle Creek and Kalamazoo. Go to www.wmich.edu/aviation for details.

Classfilter explores radio propaganda

Classical scholar Amanda Wrigley will give a free, public lecture on public radio politics and propaganda at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 15, in 3025 Brown. Visit www.wmich.edu/wmu/news/2010/03/102.html for more information.

Excel guru to give free WMU tutorial

WMU students and faculty and staff members can learn Excel skills when Bill Jelen, aka Mr. Excel, shares his knowledge from 3 to 5 p.m. Tuesday, April 20, during a free seminar in 1120 Schneider. Go to www.wmich.edu/business for details.

Professor named year’s top sponsor

Amos Aduroja, health, physical education and recreation, has been named the national Outstanding Faculty Sponsor of the Year for 2009 by Eta Sigma Gamma, the National Health Education Honor Society. Student members from the Gamma Mu Chapter nominated him for not only teaching and sharing his love of health education throughout the years, but also ensuring that all Gamma Mu members develop the skills and professionalism necessary to succeed in this field.

Grant spurs groundbreaking research

Lori Brown, aviation sciences, has received a WMU Support for Faculty Scholars Award to collaborate with the University of Nevada, in St. George, Utah. She will receive a free seminar in 1120 Schneider. Go to www.wmich.edu/research for details.

Counselor honored for scholarship

James M. Croteau, counselor education and counseling psychology, has been named as the most productive scholar in the counseling psychology area of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender scholarship. That assessment of Croteau appeared in an analysis of research productivity in LGBT studies that was featured in the January issue of the Counseling Psychologist. WMU and its counseling psychology program were ranked third nationally in terms of LGBT scholarship in counseling psychology.

Scholarly productivity rankings were based on publication in eight national refereed counseling psychology journals over the period of 1990 to 2008 and the impact of an author’s work as reflected by citation in other articles.

Croteau is a fellow of the American Psychological Association’s Society for Counseling Psychology as well as the APA Society for the Psychological Study of Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Issues. A faculty member since 1990, he is an acknowledged expert on gay and lesbian issues in the workplace and on college campuses.

Hints to prepare for the event and a list of participating school districts are available at www.wmich.edu/career or in the career and student employment office.
Make a Difference semiannual staff award winners announced

Twelve staff members have been selected to receive WMU Make a Difference awards for spring 2009-10. The awards will be presented during a reception at 2 p.m. Monday, April 19, in 157-158 Bernhard Center. The University community is invited to attend the reception, during which the award recipients each will receive a $250 and a commemorative certificate. The 12 recipients are:

• Donna “Kimm” Ballard, director of the Writing Center.
• John Carr, receiving clerk for the WMU Bookstore.
• Lillian Love, office associate for First-Year Experience programs.
• Thuy Martin, utility food worker for Dining Services-Bernhard Center.
• Eric McConnell, office associate for the Advocacy Office for Transfer Students and Military Affairs.
• Raymond Novess, construction administrator for Facilities Management-construction services.
• Gregory Feet, senior library assistant for University Libraries.
• Stephen Root, grounds supervisor for Facilities Management-landscape services.
• Dion VanAter, athletic equipment coordinator II for intercollegiate athletics.
• Margaret Von Steinen, manager of communications for the Haenicke Institute.
• Jesse Wagner, career advisor for the Haworth College of Business Career Center.
• Adam Wall, residence hall director for the Office of Residence Life.

The Make a Difference awards program is a campuswide peer-to-peer program that recognizes University staff members for their outstanding accomplishments and daily investment of energy and creativity. The winners are selected by a committee of their peers from five participating employee groups.

Those groups are the Administrative Professional Association; American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees; Michigan State Employees Association; Police Officers Association; and Professional Support Staff Organization.

Visit www.wmich.edu/hr/make-a-difference for more information about the committee and the Make a Difference Award program.

Genocide survivor to talk on forgiveness during Respecting Differences events

A survivor of the 1994 Rwandan genocide will speak on “The Power of Forgiveness” during the 12th annual Respecting Differences program Thursday and Friday, April 22-23.

The featured speaker, Immaculee Ilibagiza, wrote the New York Times Best Seller, “Left to Tell: Discovering God Amidst the Tragedy.” Ilibagiza will present her Respecting Differences talk twice, as well as speak during an event being sponsored by the Kalamazoo-based Fetzer Institute.

WMU employees are encouraged to attend one of her three, free talks, all of which will be on a first-come, first-seated basis and include on-stage American Sign Language interpreters. Employees are asked to bring their reminder postcards—or tickets—with them to the event they attend. The tickets will be sent soon through campus mail.

The Respecting Differences program will take place at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, April 22, and 9 a.m. Friday, April 23, in Kalamazoo’s State Theatre, 404 S. Burdick St.

The Fetzer Institute program will take place at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 22, in the auditorium of Kalamazoo Central High School, 2432 N. Drake Road. This event’s attendees are asked to RSVP online at www.fetzer.org or toll-free at (888) 449-4889.

Ilibagiza, regarded as one of the world’s leading speakers on peace, faith and forgiveness, has worked with the United Nations and received many humanitarian awards. She will connect her life-changing story and survival methods to issues of stereotypes, group dynamics, peer-to-peer conflict, mediation (forgiveness) and discrimination.

Graduate College to be assessed

Provost Timothy Greene will launch a campuswide discussion on the role and structure of the Graduate College over the next four to six weeks.

The college’s dean, Lewis Pyrsyn, is nearing completion of his four-year term as dean and has announced his intention to return to the faculty and teach in the Department of History, effective July 1.

Greene thanked Pyrsyn for his years of service as dean and in an e-mail to academic leadership on campus, noted that the timing is right for conversations with members of the faculty and University administration as to what the college’s future role and responsibilities should be.

Over the next few weeks, he will be soliciting input from multiple campus sources.

Honors college slates summer programs for talented youth

The Academically Talented Youth Program in the Lee Honors College is again offering summer programs for local students entering grades 7-9, and in one case, grades 6-9. Summer programs are half-day classes that run for one to two weeks, and cost $100 per week. Space is limited, so students are encouraged to enroll early. The deadline to register is June 1.

The 2010 offerings include: Web Page Design, Graphic Novels and a Poetry Workshop. New this year is a course in Pinhole Photography, which allows students to create their own cameras and learn the science behind taking pictures.

For more detailed information on the programs, instructors, schedule and a downloadable registration form, visit www.wmich.edu/honors/atyp and click the Register Now link under Summer Programs or contact the ATYP office at atyp-info@wmich.edu or 587-3230.

Technology expo ends today

Today is the last day of TotalTech’s expo. Attendees can check out the newest computers and gadgets—and enter to win prizes. The free expo runs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Textbook Alley in the Bronx Mall.

Make a Difference Award winners Jack Culp

Culp became a full-time employee in 1970 and worked in what is now Facilities Management as assistant manager of electrical operations. He retired in 1998 after nearly 30 years of service to the University.

In addition, he worked out on a regular basis, and for the last 25 years of his life, did extensive lap swimming. He also was dedicated to weightlifting, which earned him multiple titles from 2002 to 2007 as the Michigan Senior Olympics Bench Press (300 lbs) Champion.

Visit www.lifestorynet.com/memories/48705 for more information about Culp. Memorial contributions may be made to the American Cancer Society.
Enforcing the law and keeping the WMU community safe sometimes requires the high-tech help of equipment that can read information out loud from a squad car or paperless recorders that electronically send tickets to court offices. This and even more equipment is maintained and updated by Scott Coy, who manages the Department of Public Safety’s communication systems and a wide range of gear for its campus police unit. Coy joined WMU almost 10 years ago as a police officer and was promoted to sergeant in 2008 and lieutenant in 2009. A self-professed “technology geek,” he says he tries to stay ahead of the trends in technology. “You have to think outside of the box as far as what the needs of the University police department are,” Coy says, “and I like to keep things ahead of the curve.”

The toughest part is striking a balance between looking to the future and maintaining a budgetary bottom line. University officers last year tested new equipment such as Segway personal scooters, but those devices are still too expensive.

Changes, however, are always being made. Police officers on bike patrol are using new uniforms this spring, allowing officers to withstand cooler temperatures and use bicycles longer during the year. The department’s cars are also being replaced with SUVs, which last longer and ultimately end up being greener than cars.

“Because of the nature of law enforcement, it doesn’t lend itself to good gas mileage for any vehicle. A lot of people don’t realize our total costs are lower and we actually get a lot more out of SUVs,” Coy says.

Besides being responsible for updating technology for the department, Coy also is involved with projects across the campus. He is on the committee for the University’s new emergency alert system—the Mass Notification Program—which is a campus-wide system that has been installed for emergency notification. He also is responsible for compiling the annual campus crime report for the federal government as well as the Clery Report, which every fall publishes statistics and information about crime on campus for the previous calendar year.

A native of Kalkaska, Mich., Coy is a 2001 graduate of WMU’s criminal justice program. Prior to working at the University, he ran the marine division for the Antim County Sheriff’s Department.

Coy is married to Rebecca, a WMU police officer for nine years. The couple has two young daughters and lives in Kalamazoo Township.

calligrapher to talk about his craft, Chinese culture

A gifted Chinese calligrapher will speak about his craft and Chinese culture from 2 to 4 p.m., April 16, in 2037 Brown.

Yue-chuan Wang, a full-time professor from Beijing University, will present the free, public talk, which is being sponsored by the Confucius Institute at WMU.

Wang is a leading academic in the field of literary studies and an accomplished artist in calligraphy, painting and music.

He lent his calligraphic expertise to the creation of the script for “The Light of Chinese Civilization” documentary TV series and provides commentary on several topics for the series. His calligraphic works and paintings are included in a wide variety of international collections and published volumes.

Mandated ethnicity survey being conducted at WMU

New federal guidelines mandate that WMU begin collecting race and ethnicity information for all of its faculty and staff members.

The Department of Education is requiring all universities to use a two-part question.
