Spring 1958

kuru

Max Steele

Western Michigan University

Follow this and additional works at: http://scholarworks.wmich.edu/calliope

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Steele, Max (1958) "kuru," Calliope: Vol. 4 : Iss. 3 , Article 25.
Available at: http://scholarworks.wmich.edu/calliope/vol4/iss3/25

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the English at ScholarWorks at WMU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Calliope by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at WMU. For more information, please contact maira.bundza@wmich.edu.
Screams fell on Crete, and echoes rank in Labyrinth;
Daedalus flailed the air, and charged into Icarus’ sky-wake;
But Icarus flew on, and laughed at melting wings.
They fell away, a rainbow west of Samos,
Forever lost in the surging Icarian Sea.

The script is old and I can read no farther
So I must block in words and bits of business,
For plays should end with a triumphant curtain.
I must think upon the Sun, the Icarus-loved Sky-God.
I know that in Him gods find their completion:
And soaring on forever, look down on Crete with pity.
Under folded cellophane wings I hesitate off-stage.
When the house-lights dim, I shall be Icarus of Crete.

Barbara Troy

kuru

yes father jackson
i believe in the trinity in the father (picasso shubert and shakespeare)
in the son (pierrot the unfinished and king lear)
and in the holy ghost (eadimo)

and i believe in satan (magnificent in sin)
and i believe in you father jackson in kuru the creeping horror in kuru the laughing death

Max Steele