Humanitarian

Peter J. Reed
Western Michigan University

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.wmich.edu/calliope

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://scholarworks.wmich.edu/calliope/vol1975/iss1/11

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the English at ScholarWorks at WMU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Calliope (1954-2001) by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at WMU. For more information, please contact wmu-scholarworks@wmich.edu.
PETER J. REED

HUMANITARIAN

We were on the third floor and she had some dog with her.

"Whose dog?" I said.

"I found it." That was her.

"That means it's somebody's."

"Yeah, well I guess so," she said.

"Best thing to do when you find somebody's dog," I said, "is kick it in the ass and tell it to go home."

"Oh. Yeah?"

"Yup," I said, knowing she would ask me why.

"Why kick it?" I had this one all figured out.

She was the humanitarian type.

"Oh, that's just so it won't follow you," I told her,

"so it'll think you don't like it."

"Oh. Yeah."

"Ummhumm." That was me.

MYSTERY TO ME

I feel so bad tonight.

My shoes go

  shit shit
    shit

on the pavement.

It's cold and wet

and I have no idea

where you are.