Terms of tentative agreement released

Terms of a tentative three-year collective bargaining agreement between the University and its local chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) were jointly released July 22 by both parties.

After nine intensive bargaining sessions, the two teams negotiating the new contract for faculty at WMU arrived at a tentative agreement that will improve Western's faculty salaries and we believe this new contract will achieve that goal," commented President Haenicke.

"We got to talking about what was needed to improve Western's faculty salaries and we believe this new contract will achieve that goal," commented President Haenicke.

"We wanted to find a way to be certain that certain types of separations that have been made since Kelley described as one of the hottest timelines he's ever seen for such a program. And it was announced a month later in July 16, 1984.

The need for the joint program was planted when Kelley was dean of the School of Behavioral Science and Human Services, and Alan B. Donovan, vice president for academic affairs, from Northern; and George M. Dennison, provost and vice president for academic affairs, from WMU. Grant to support research on Iran

A Western faculty member is one of 210 Americans who have received a $3,500 National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Stipend for research.

Mary E. Hegland, anthropology, was selected for the award from among 1,421 applicants. Hegland's work will focus on Iran and its takeover by the Shah of Iran and its takeover by the Shah after the Iranian revolution.

The NEH grant is enabling Hegland to do research, writing and editing. She is revising her dissertation for publication and several publishers have already expressed an interest.

300 here for MLK/Parks event

More than 300 junior high and middle school students are on campus this week next as part of the summer component of the Martin Luther King Jr./Rosa Parks College Program.

Students from the Benton Harbor, Detroit, Flint Beecher, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo and Saginaw districts will attend one of two summer sessions scheduled for July 26-21 and Aug. 8-7.

For the seventh year, students will live in residence halls, tour the campus and participate in academic activities designed to give them hands-on experience with different majors and programs of study.

The program is being coordinated by John F. Abeler, who also directs WMU's Upward Bound Program.

Tuition applications due

The deadline for faculty members to apply for fall tuition subsidies is Thursday, Aug. 13.

The Faculty Tuition Subsidy Program pays that portion of tuition not covered by staff benefits for up to six credit hours of coursework. Staff and general computer fees also are covered. Limited assistance also is available to faculty at other institutions. Applications are available from the Office of Faculty Development at 2-1507.
