Wonderling named to head athletics division

Tom Wonderling, who produced three nationally prominent programs as athletic director at California Poly-Pomona, will become George Mallinson's vice director of intercollegiate athletics here, it was announced Tuesday by President John T. Bernhard.

Mallinson also is credited with being the "prime mover" in the University obtaining an IBM 2600 computer some years ago and later its present PDP-10 computer, before anyone else envisioned the University's need for computers in research.

A distinguished professor of education and science education here since 1977, Mallinson has been credited with being "the major force in the development of the University's graduate programs that ultimately led to the granting of doctoral degrees here."

The nomination notes that Mallinson "constantly sought support for research and almost single-handedly pushed for the establishment of the Office of Research Services," now the Division of Research and Sponsored Programs.

Sharma observed that Mallinson is credited with "being the major force in the development of the University's graduate programs that ultimately led to the granting of doctoral degrees here."

Next meeting of Trustees to be Friday, Apr. 24

The next meeting of the Board of Trustees will be Friday, Apr. 24—one day before commencement, which will be Saturday, Apr. 25. The Board usually meets on the second Friday of the month, except at commencement time.

Mallinson to receive Distinguished Service Award

The award, in its second year, is given to one Board of Trustees-appointed faculty or staff member each year in recognition of outstanding service to the University community above and beyond the normally expected execution of professional duties and responsibilities. It was recommended by President John T. Bernhard and the Faculty Senate in 1978.

NCA team recommends continuing accreditation

In a letter to the University community, President John T. Bernhard announced that the visiting team of the North Central Association has recommended that Western receive continuing accreditation for 10 years, without any stipulation.

"It is not possible to do better than that," Bernhard said. "Allow me to compliment all of you for the fine effort that was put forward during the recent visit of the team."

The president continued, "In the final debriefing session with the executive officers of the University, the visiting team described an impressive list of strengths and also a modest list of concerns. Of course, I was pleased to learn of the high regard which the visitors had for our University and its programs. An even greater delight was the realization that we are currently implementing efforts aimed at addressing most of the concerns the team identified."

"The list of individuals who deserve special thanks is very long. I would like to thank, for example, Mr. and Mrs. George Mallinson, who has been a faculty member here since 1948, has been selected to receive the 1981 Distinguished Service Award."

"According to his nomination, no one person has moved in more areas to direct the University forward than George Mallinson," said Vish B. Sharma, professor of social science and sociology and chairperson of the Distinguished Service Award selection committee.

Mallinson will receive a recognition plaque and a check for $1,000 during Aug. 21 commencement exercises in Waldo Stadium. This award is not to be confused with the University Distinguished Service Award granted by the Board of Trustees.

Sharma observed that Mallinson is credited with "being the major force in the development of the University's graduate programs that ultimately led to the granting of doctoral degrees here."

The nomination notes that Mallinson "constantly sought support for research and almost single-handedly pushed for the establishment of the Office of Research Services," now the Division of Research and Sponsored Programs.

Sharma said it is believed that without Mallinson's "push" there probably would be no Department of Blind Rehabilitation.

Observance Tuesday for Atlanta children

A public gathering called "Children of Atlanta: a University Observance" will be conducted at noon Tuesday in front of Kanley Memorial Chapel.

Richard Redden, director of minority student services, who is coordinating the observance, said in the event of inclement weather the program will be moved into the chapel.

President John T. Bernhard will present opening remarks; the Voices of WMU Gospel Choir will sing two selections; the names of the 25 slain or missing youths in Atlanta will be read by Earl M. Washington, communication arts and sciences and another faculty member; and Paul A. Maier, history, will give a scripture reading.

The observance will conclude with a tolling of 25 chimes in the Kanley tower.

"As a show of unity and of concern for the tragedy in Atlanta, campus bells at Kalamazoo College and Nazareth College will be rung at the same time as the Kanley chimes," Redden said.

Redden noted that the observance sprung from an idea by Paulette Johnson, a Kalamazoo junior who sings with the Voices of WMU Gospel Choir.

Redden said the event will "demonstrate that Western is a progressive, pluralistic university and is affected by what goes on around the nation. It will show support to our friends in Atlanta and it will give a spiritual uplift to all who take part."

The event is sponsored by the Division of Student Services and its Office of Minority Student Services.

Ehrle, Bennett urge faculty cooperation on implementation of final-exam policy

Elwood B. (Woody) Ehrle, vice president for academic affairs, and Roger Bennett, president of the Faculty Senate, have called on the University community for cooperation in the implementation of the final-exam policy.

In a letter to the University community, Ehrle and Bennett point to three sources of concern leading to apprehension about the policy: Uncertainty among students about the nature and demands of a final exam, concerns about the "mode of delivery" of exams and the apparent lack of protection for those students who may find themselves with three or more final exams on the same day.

Responding to those concerns, the letter declares, "It will be helpful if faculty describe their intended exams to students. Any steps taken to describe performance expectations will go a long way to alleviate apprehension and consequently improve performance."

Ehrle and Bennett pointed out that "pen and paper exams with students in every other seat" need not be the only means of administering a final examination.

"To help people to think more broadly about the possible modes and styles that could be utilized, the Office of Instructional Development has been asked to prepare informative materials indicating alternative modes and styles that might be useful."

The letter continued, the "policy deliberately avoids specifying particular alternatives and we continue to believe that to be for the best. All faculty have taken and given many final exams. We encourage each faculty member to reflect broadly on his or her experience and select those modes and styles most in keeping with their teaching strategies. Again, any information that can be provided to students will, we are sure, be helpful."

Ehrle and Bennett urged faculty members "to be particularly sensitive" to the possibility that some students may have three or more examinations scheduled on the same day.

"Department chairs and deans should be prepared to resolve difficulties as they arise whenever resolution eludes the faculty members directly involved. Anything done to make alternate arrangements for students faced with this problem will be helpful."

And they added, "Meanwhile, we thank you for your efforts in making (the policy) work as well as possible this first time through."

Accounts receivable form to be changed

In May, the Student Accounts Receivable statement will be a new abbreviated format. Under the new format, students will receive a one-page statement showing “bank draft forward” from the prior month’s statement.

The new statements will reflect only the current month’s payments and charges. Statements will continue to reflect delinquent balances over 30, 60 and 90 days. All amounts delinquent beyond the current month must be subject to a service charge of 1 percent per month (12 percent annually).

The effect of this change on students is significant since there are between 8,000 and 10,000 statements mailed each month. Students are encouraged to keep each monthly statement for their records.

The benefits of the new statement format will be a clearer, more concise statement for the student and savings in postage, paper and computer services to the University. Questions regarding the new statement format may be directed to the Accounts Receivable Department, 3062 Seibel Administration Building, call 3-0560.
