AN ATTITUDE SURVEY OF UNINTERRUPTED SUSTAINED SILENT READING

Mrs. Honey Halpern
FACULTY OF EDUCATION
UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA, VANCOUVER, B.C., CANADA

Uninterrupted Sustained Silent Reading, more usually referred to as U.S.S.R., was introduced by Lyman J. Hunt of the University of Vermont in the early sixties. Since that time reports indicate that many elementary and secondary schools in the United States and Canada have installed USSR into their timetables (Jones, 1978; Mork, 1972; Petre, 1971). There is an abundance of literature describing in general terms this program of silent reading of a self-selected book (Allington, 1975; Carner, 1969; Ganz & Theofield, 1974; McCracken, 1971; Noland, 1976; Oliver, 1970). More recently authors have suggested detailed methods of organizing a classroom in order to maintain a USSR program (Gambreil, 1978; McCracken & McCracken, 1978). The focus of these recent articles is on the specifics of application rather than on the generalities of organization. In addition, some empirical research has been carried out on the effects of this kind of program (Evans and Towner, 1975; Harvey, 1974; Mikulecky and Wolf, 1977; Oliver, 1976). There appears to be little doubt that both researchers and classroom teachers have more than just a passing interest in USSR.

Why an Attitude Survey?

The USSR Attitude Survey presented here evolved from active participation in a USSR program, discussion with teachers and students who have had experience with the program and extensive reading on the topic. Almost everyone who has participated in USSR has been pleased with the program. Increased interest in reading, increased awareness of a variety of books, increased feelings of community within a classroom, and increased awareness of the reading program have all been reported.

Most people who use this reading method in their classrooms have their own way of organizing the actual practice. It is these variations that need to be investigated in order to find the actual or potential weaknesses of the program. For example, in one classroom a teacher may use this quiet time to mark workbooks, to conduct interviews, or to leave the room in order to run off a stencil, make a phone call, or to simply take a 15 minute break. In this instance the teacher is not acting as a model. A teacher moving about could be a cause of interference with the reading program. Teacher modelling is very important to the success of USSR (McCracken and McCracken, 1978).

Another variation besides the absence of teacher modelling could be in book selection. Provisions are not always made for the students who forget their books and these absent-minded people are expected to sit quietly while the others read. Or students that were able to find one interesting book at the start of the program are unable to find a second or third good book after the first one is completed. The importance of providing interesting reading material must be taken very seriously. Many students need a lot of assistance in finding good books. Periodic library visits or even a classroom collection of assorted titles can help introduce students to literary selections.

Another problem often contributing to difficulty in the program is classroom and hall disruptions. Using the Attitude Survey the teacher can identify these problems early and make the necessary adjustments. For example, it may be necessary to cut short the USSR program for a couple of days in order to make the class aware that the teacher is firm about providing an uninterrupted quiet atmosphere.

Sometimes, because of student restlessness or misbehavior, teachers have unfortunately chosen to discontinue their USSR programs. One of the purposes of this attitude survey is to provide these teachers with information on student feelings, which can then be used to remedy weaknesses and promote the continuation of USSR.

In some school districts the decision to adopt a program of USSR depends on analysis of test results. In such circumstances, however, is allowance being made for the possibility that the program is interpreted differently in individual classrooms? Because of the high degree of variation from classroom to classroom with regard to such factors as the availability of books, the quietness of the environment and the role of the teacher, it is suggested that the results of statistical testing are of limited value. Thus, another purpose of the Attitude Survey is to allow each teacher to evaluate the program's worth for her own group of students. If more evaluative information is required, statistical measures can be taken after the program has been refined and improved on the basis of the information gleaned from the Survey. Hence it would be appropriate to give this Survey in order to iron out the kinks in the program before embarking on extensive empirical data taking.
What It Is and How To Use It

The USSR Attitude Survey is very simple to administer and score. There are eleven statements that students are to respond to by circling their preference on a seven-point scale. The choices on the scale range from "disagree very strongly" to "agree very strongly." Two examples are provided before the attitude statements are presented. The second section requires yes-no answers to statement groups on the practice of the program. Here, too, examples are provided to help the student understand the directions.

Each statement is to be judged on its own. There is no need to total the group scores on the overall Survey. In the first section the scores for each statement should be added together and averaged. In the second section it is suggested that the total number of yes and no answers be calculated for each item. This straightforward analysis is all that is necessary for an item-by-item summary of students' attitudes.

When To Use It

It would be appropriate to administer this Survey after USSR has been in operation for at least six weeks since any difficulties that may arise in connection with the implementation of the program will have appeared. The information derived from the Survey will help teachers and administrators redirect the program in appropriate ways.

This Attitude Survey is not being suggested as a total evaluation scheme for a class or school. It is best used by classroom teachers to investigate actual or potential strengths and weaknesses. A more complete method of evaluation would include some or all of the following: interviewing teachers and students, administering a Reading Attitude Survey, observing the program in practice, making sure that students keep records of their reading, and obtaining feedback from librarians and parents.

The principle idea of this Attitude Survey is to give insight into students' reactions to their USSR program. To date it has been used successfully by teachers of high school and junior high classes, as well as intermediate levels. Teachers have been enthusiastic about the information it provided. Teachers in Toronto, Montreal, and Vancouver reported that this Attitude Survey gave feedback that helped their organization of the USSR program.

STUDENT ATTITUDE SURVEY ON UNINTERRUPTED SUSTAINED SILENT READING

This attitude survey is an attempt to determine students' feelings toward USSR. This will help your teachers decide if the USSR program should be changed and improved on in any way. On this first page you will be asked to answer a few general questions. On the other pages you will be asked to respond to statements of opinion on the different parts of the USSR program. Read the instructions carefully before responding to the statements.

General Questions

1. What grade are you in? ___________

2. When did you start USSR in class?
   year ________ month ________

3. How many days a week do you do USSR?
   __________

4. How long is each USSR session? ________

5. How much time do you spend each day after school reading things other than school-books?
   ________

6. Are you male? _______
   female? ______

ATTITUDE SURVEY ON USSR
DIRECTIONS

You are being asked to respond to a number of statements. Seven choices are given for each statement. The choices range from disagree very strongly to agree very strongly. The seven choices are:

1 2 3 4 5 6 7

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1</th>
<th>2</th>
<th>3</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>5</th>
<th>6</th>
<th>7</th>

Following each statement you will see a line of numbers. These seven numbers correspond to the above numbered line. Please circle the number that best describes your feelings about each of the statements. Remember that you may choose any one of the seven numbers.
Two examples are provided. If there are any difficulties in answering this survey, please ask your teacher for help.

EXAMPLES

Every student should be given free milk at lunch time.

Christmas holidays should be longer.

ATTITUDE SURVEY ON USSR

1) I think that our teacher should give us marks for reading during USSR.

2) I think that students who disturb others during USSR ought to be punished by the teacher.

3) I feel it is difficult to find interesting books to read during USSR.

4) I would like to have a stack of comics and/or magazines in the classroom that could be used during USSR.

5) I find myself reading books after school that I started during USSR.

6) I used to read after school even before we started USSR.

7) When our class does USSR, noise from other students in our class stops me from reading.
8) I find that when we are doing USSR, noise from outside the classroom stops me from reading.

9) I would read my own books after school even if we didn’t have USSR during schooltime.

10) I feel that USSR is a good time to try different kinds of books to see if I like them and want to finish them.

10a) I think USSR is a worthwhile activity and I am pleased that our class does it.

DIRECTIONS: Please circle either yes or no to the following statements. An example is provided. If there are any difficulties in answering this section of the survey, please ask your teacher for help.

EXAMPLE: My after-school activities are:

- baby-sitting: yes, no
- TV watching: yes, no
- school sports: yes, no
- music lessons: yes, no
- homework: yes, no
- kite flying: yes, no

ATTITUDE SURVEY ON USSR

11) I think that we ought to do USSR at the time of day we now have it

12) Having a book ready for USSR is always a problem

12a) Having a book ready for USSR is sometimes a problem

12b) Having a book ready for USSR is not a problem
13) I get my books for USSR from a friend yes no
   the school library yes no
   teacher recommends yes no
   home yes no
   classroom library yes no
   bookstore yes no
   other places/people yes no
   if yes, list ____________

(Answer either number 14 or number 15)

14) If your parents know that you do USSR, are they:
   pleased that you do USSR yes no
   of the opinion that USSR is a waste of school time yes no trying to have your family do USSR together yes no
   interested in finding out more about USSR yes no

15) If your parents don't know that you do USSR, should they be told what USSR is yes no
   they be told that you do USSR yes no

16) During USSR I would prefer that my teacher
   read a book yes no
   spend the time making sure that everyone in class reads yes no
   leave the room yes no

17) During USSR does your teacher stop USSR at first interruption yes no mark papers, talk to others yes no
   see that students read yes no
   read a book yes no

18) I think that the amount of time that our class spends on USSR each day is:
   too long yes no
   too short yes no
   just right yes no
   a waste of school time yes no
