dePeaux Serigraph Prints and Videotape Making Marks

A set of 23 large, serigraph prints made by Richard dePeaux, associate professor of humanities and art, recently was purchased by the Northwestern University libraries.

Limited to an edition of 40 copies each, their subject matter was the score of a piece of contemporary music for alto saxophone and piano entitled "Hymn sacrosanct," composed by C. Curtis-Smith, WMU associate professor of music.

dePeaux worked on the serigraphs of the main score while he was at the University of Wisconsin-Madison on a fellowship during the 1977-78 academic year. He hand-set and printed the type for the score himself. He also has made a videotape of the composition, as played by Curtis-Smith on piano and Trent Kynaston, WMU associate professor of music, on alto saxophone, and "painted" it in varying abstract colors with a video synthesizer, concentrating on the instruments and the performers.

The videotape will be shown at the World Saxophone Congress, June 28-July 1 in Chicago. Funding for the videotape was supported by a WMU faculty research grant and fellowship.

Remind Faculty of Student Rights

Among those formal "Student Academic Rights" (Undergraduate Catalog, page 40) endorsed as University policy, two in particular frequently are overlooked by faculty, with resultant misunderstanding, problems, and even the filing of student grievances, according to Dr. Philip Dennenfeld, associate vice president for academic affairs.

On the two "Rights," reprinted below as a reminder to faculty:

1. "Students have the right to have all their examinations and other (written) graded material made available to them with an explanation of the grading criteria. Faculty should retain all such material not returned to the student for at least one full semester after the course was given. Faculty are not required to return such material to the student but it must provide reasonable access to it."

2. "Students should be fully informed by the faculty about course requirements, evaluating procedures and academic criteria to be used in each class. This information should be provided at the beginning of the semester or sufficiently in advance of academic evaluation."

"Material from a winter semester course should be retained until the completion of the following fall semester."
